Poetry.

The cornsilk tassels on the ridge Are bronzing in the sun; The elderberries by the bridge, And all along the run,

Grow purple through the golden days; Barberries by the wall Grow crimson in the silver baze That ushers in the fall.

Old ocean dreams in slumbers deep Of wintry stroms to come; In far off mountain caverns sleep

The winds; the brooks are dumb. The partridge, in lone country lanes, Whire low a speckled wing ; Silence through all the woodlands reigns

From yellow cornfields slowly pass The crows, with clanging cry; All day upon the orchard grass Ripe apples fall. A sigh

The birds forget to sing.

Escaped the earth at thought of death, For summer's life so brief. And, fluttering on that sigh's faint breath, Falls down the first red leaf. -[Annie M. Libby in Good Housekeeping.
