A Last Chord.

Seated one day at the organ,—
I was weary and ill at ease,
And my fingers wandered idly
Over the noisy keys.

It quieted pain and sorrow, Like love overcoming strife; It seemed the harmonious echo From our discordant life. It linked all perplexed meanings

And trembled away into silence, As if it were loth to cease. I have sought, but I seek it vainly, inat one lost chord divine That came from the soul of the organ And entered into mine.

It may be that Death's bright angel Will speak in that cord again, It may be that only in heaven I shall hear that grand amen. -Adelaide Anne Proctor.

Selegt Tale. BARTON'S WIFE.

We were seated on a bench overlook ing the sea at Long Beach, Barton Wight, my bethrothed husband and I. Before us in the sand, Minnie, his little giri, was playing and scrambling with glee as she ran races with the waves. A wilful little child she was, but I had taken a great fancy to her, as every one did at the hotel, notwithstanding the frequent displays of temper. 'I know' said Barton finally noticing

You Have Had Enough. When a man has drank up his farm, his house, his furniture; when he has ruined his wife, beggered his children and lost his home when he is too dissipated to find employment. too worthless to obtain a situation; when no one can trust bim; when credit is gone, and the last cent is spent; when no man is willing to treat him or give him a penny with which he can obtain drink ; when every other resource has failed, and life has become a curse, and he stands before the liquor dealer's bar and begs for a drink to quench his raging thirst, quiet for an hour the hell of torment come; and, as the liquor-dealer shoves him out into the cold and darkness, he says to him, "You have had enough." He may plead, he may expostulate, but in vain. Scientists inform us that we may expect a visit this summer from the terrible scourge, cholera. West's Pain King is the remedy to keep.
