SATURDAY, JULY 9, 1887.

Dominion Day at Driving Park.

The sports at the Park, on Dominion Day, were above the average, the races were hotly contested throughout. The first race called on the three-minute class—was very closely contested especially between Joe Hooker and Phillip Logan, and, after trotting six heats, was finally won by Joe Hooker. The following is the—

In the five-year-old race, Gold Note, driven by Worthy, and owned by B. D. Chase, of Woodstock, won easily, although Bessie Morris trotted very well, and, at times, shoved the leader pretty close, but Mayflower was hopelessly in the rear all the time, and it was claimed she was sick, which accounted for her poor showing. Following is the—

SUMMARY.

Brooks' Reply to Palmer.

To the Editors of the Carleton Sentinel:

I would like to say that my only object in replying to Mr. Palmer was to correct the misrepresentations in his first article. I knew in reason that he would make a personal attack on me and I determined not to answer anything personal, this is my reason for passing over much that Mr. P. has written. In his article of May 16th he says that I valued W. L. Drier's personal property at $631 and Mr. P's at $843; before me is a book that we posted for correction and inspection. How does it read? Mr. Drier $1,600 personal property, Mr. P. not one cent; that is the way it stands at present. In regard to James Lipsett's property he says of 74 acres on the list is $1,600; suppose we compare it with Mr. P's 150 acres at $1900 that will be some benefit to him. I do not know that Mr. D. ever complained of his real estate, but in looking over the list of 1877, before I was a Simonds official it reads the same. He also informs the public that if I am continued as an assessor he will make a great reduction in the valuation he placed on himself of $3000. I understand by this that the statement he will give the assessors in future will be the truth if the men built him, and if they do not it will be something of a different nature; does he not know that the law is very plain on this point?

In looking over Mr. Palmer's letter in your issue of June 18th, I must say it looks like the work of a crank, but what he is trying to do with A. D. Shaw's real estate is more than I can tell; there is one thing certain he accuses Mr. Shaw with misleading the assessors. As far as I know he has the confidence of the community. But suppose after all Mr. P's turning and twisting, his addition and division, he makes out that Mr. Shaw has not been taxed for half he is worth, and the statement about O. M. Sherwood's property, surely no sane man would make such a statement to the public, and if they were correct, Mr. P. would be condemning himself and trying to prove his own guilt when he had it in his power to correct the mistakes he complained of. I repeat he did not attempt to correct them; it appears that Mr. P. endorsed what this wicked man Brooks did in '85 and it is possible that for once in his life he resolved to act the man, but circumstances were against him in '86, the man that he represents as a sinner above all men that he dwells in Simonds was in his place. Alas, for good resolutions, they vanished like the morning dew. My own convictions are that if Mr. P. had been appointed assessor, he would never have discovered the mistakes; it is not the property but the man Brooks, he is driving at. He says public men are public property, but who ever knew of an assessor fighting his own work. He informs us that just men were directed when ill-treated in one place to flee to another, what kind of men were they and what was their mission; they did not serve self as the one object of life, neither did they bow down and worship the golden calf, but were men of honor, and it was for the truth they were persecuted. Now if there is any person in Simonds or any other place that would persecute Mr. P. for the truth contained in the articles he has written for the SENTINEL on this question, he ought to be punished severely and if I had my way he would suffer for all treating an innocent man in this respect.

I remain yours,

THOMAS T. BROOKS.

LITERARY NOTICES.

Our Little Ones And The Nursery for July is before us presenting a very attractive appearance, with a table of contents that cannot fail to please the eye and the mind of the little ones.

Our Little Men and Women is fully half pictures. The other half, stories and histories good for six-year-olds. It is worth one's while to be a youngster nowadays. $1 a year. Send five cents to D. Lothrop Company, Boston, for sample copy. A primer descriptive of all the Lothrop magazines sent free.

The July Number of Harper's Magazine opens with a very strong article, in the series of "Great American Industries," on Printing, continuing the important article in the previous Number on Paper. Apropos of the Fourth of July and of the commencement season, is an entertaining article by Captain Charles King, U.S.A., upon "Cadet Life at West Point, describing the inner workings of the National Military Academy, with an abundance of illustrations by R. F. Zogbaum. The famous African traveller, Joseph Thomson, writes entertainingly concerning the customs and civilization of "A Central Soudan Town." His text is illustrated from photographs taken on the spot. A stirring incident of the war is told in Miss Grace King's story, "Bayou L'Ombre." Another bright story is "An Etymological Sketch," by Annie Trumbull Slosson. The Easy Chair comments in the usual lively manner upon topics suggested by current events.

The July Wide Awake ought to be put in the hands of every youngster in the land. It opens with a long and delightful account of "Washington's Boyhood, Pursuits and Companions," written by William F. Carne, a citizen of the old village of Belhaven where the young Washington lived in his early years. The paper is full of anecdotes and traits of the great President. It has a full page illustration by Howard Pyle. A stirring Fourth of July story, "The Use of It," is from the pen of Mrs. Harriet A. Cheever. The Queen's Jubilee is commemorated by a pretty paper of anecdotes from the pen of an Englishwoman, Mrs. Raymond Blathwayt, which is accompanied by a full-page engraving of the famous sitting statue of the Queen, by Boehm, which stands in the Grand Vestibule at Windsor Castle; the article is entitled "Every Inch a Queen." There is a good piece of biography in the "Successful Women" series, about Dr. Rachel Littler Bodley, the Dean of the Philadelphia Women's Medical College, also much bright verse and picture. $2.40 a year. D. Lothrop Company, Publishers, Boston, Mass.

The table of contents of The American Magazine for July is remarkable for length and variety. The frontispiece reproduces a painting by Seaton Donoho, bearing reference to the well known tradition, embalmed in Maryland archives, that several Indian tribes used to hold their yearly councils on the hill where now stands the national capital. Under the title, "Metlakatla," Z. L. White tells, with illustrations, the story of the complete civilization of an Indian tribe on the Northwest Coast. In the July installment of "Olivia Delaplaine," Mr. Fawcett leads his readers out of the elegant circles of wealth and fashion, and introduces them to the less refined but perhaps more amusing society gathered at the table of a New York boarding house. Rev. S. W. Culver, President of Bishop College (Marshall, Texas), gives an interesting account of the colored schools in the Southwest. An illustrated article on Literary Life in Philadelphia, by Moses P. Handy (Editor of The Daily News of that city), gives several brief sketches of men and women famous in the world of letters. Book auctions and bibliomaniacs are sketched by Frank Lee Barnell; Longfellow's home, by Claiborne Addison Young; and a wilderness in Vermont by F. Blanchard. In "Our Diplomats at Court," Frank G. Carpenter gives an amusing resume of the difficulties encountered by our representatives abroad in the matter of costume on state occasions. The Supplement contains the short essays of "The American Pulpit," letters to the editor on "Timely Topics," and an illustrated "Portfolio" of humorous anecdotes.
