well maintained here. In addition to the usual place, to pay the last respect to the departed.

In the home around the fireside,

There is now a vacant chair : For a cherished form has left us, Bid adieu to earthly care. How we mies the kindly welcome.

From those lips now pale and still ; But we must not sadly murmur, 'Tis our Heavenly Father's will.

He has left this world of sorrow, Safely crossed the swelling flood Borne by angels to that mansion, Purchased by a Saviour's blood Simply trusting in the merits Of that love so freely given

O'er his path death cast no shadows,

And was but the gate of heaven.

Peaceful life, in death the spirit Gently winged its upward flight : Not a sigh, ere faith's dim vision, Was exchanged for glorious sight. We have heard his solemn farewell.

Sounded from the fading lips;

But above its tones One whispers.

Sweetly whispers, it is well. Earth's rude winter now is over, Heaven's sweet spring has now begun; Rest, all toil for thee is ended, Life's short race is safely run.

Though 'tis sad, we bid thee farewell, Till for us life's storms are o'er: Then again to meet our loved ones, On the bright and heavenly shore. Sailing o'er death's cold, dark river. May we reach the port of rest, Join in one unbroken family,
