The St. John River. (For the Carleton Sentinel)

Let us gaze upon the river Rolling in its power and might, And what scenes await our vision, That are beautiful and bright.

On its banks are stately dwellings, Numberless as stars on high, And their walls are filled with plenty,

Giving none the cause to sigh. It its course, it does comingle Waters of two nations grand; Still peacefully it glides onward Till it finds its destined strand.

We still recall the "trio" story Of the ancient days of yore; Played by Indian, French and Briton, On its thus romantic shore. Not behind in acts of interest,

On this, our own, our Jubilee year,
By a mighty flood, most special,
It did show our Queen was dear. On its banks are sons most loyal-
