'Remember, to-night you shape your Mr Ainsley, a tall, fine-looking man, in the prime of life, addressed these words to his daughter.

CHAPTER I.

Gladys Ainsley was 17 years of age, rather short of stature, but she carried herself with a certain dignity that became her well. She owned a pair of hazel eyes that peeped merrily from beneath her long lashes. The goldenbrown hair fell in little waves on her low, broad brow, and the ruby lips, perhaps a triffe too full, formed a pretty little pout. The aristocratic little nose was elevated in the air as her father repeated the words, 'Remember to-night | The railroads built and to be built you shape your own future.'

'Now I don't want any of your nonsense,' said Mr. Ainsley angrily. The girl's face fell immediately. This powder never varies. A marvel of purity strength and wholesomeness. More economica than the ordinary kinds and cannot be sold in ed Gladys, 'but I love Guy Norwood.,
