ST. JOH . LETTER.

St. John, February 8, 1888.

Premising that what advances the interests of St. John will be likely to benefit the rest of the Province let me touch briefly upon reet of the Province let me touch briefly upon two acts of the city's representatives last week which, carried into effect, will bring about important civic and commercial changes. St. John proper is, as it were, enclosed by two arms of the Intercolonial Railway, and an agitation to connect the ends of those arms by a line running from the Ballast Wharf along the deep water wharves to the Intercolonial Station has been in progress for years but without any perceptible result for years but without any perceptible result until last Wednesday when, upon the representations of a committee of the Trade Forgranted the "right of way" for the railway. Permission granted, the rest is easy when it is considered that the government builds the extension. Then and only then will St. John be in a position to compete with Port-land and Boston for the freight which of right belongs to her-that of Western Caneda, When it can be arranged that the freighters of the Canadian Pacific can line our wharves along the whole front of the harbor and the docks are fitted to receive ocean stesmers and The January fire loss in the United States the cargoes of Europe can be exchanged for those of Canada then the he pes of St. John people will be realized. The first step towards that realization has been taken.

Another act and one not less important was that which referred to the appointment of a commission by the local house to arrange a basis for the union of the cities of St. John and Portland. It does not seem fitting that John Keenan, the New York boodler, is building a $100,000 residence in Montreal. largest river and around the best harbor in N. B. with identical interests should have seperate civic governments. The strongest oponents of the union have given way; the So I began in a grocery; the work was hard, but it needed only a visit to Rosa to make it seem light. We lived somehow, Rosa and I. I slept in the store and boarded on odds and ends, for it shock that followed killed him.
