How Little We Know of Each Other. How little we know of each other. We pass through the journey of life, With its struggles, its fears and temptations,

Its heart-breaking cares and its strife. We see things alone on the surface, For few of us glory in sin; And an unruffled face is no index Of fires that rage wildly within.

How little we know of each other. The man who walks quietly by, With wealth and with honor and title And holds his head proudly on high Oft carries dread secrets within him That render existence a curse; Dread secrets that sear his soul over, Of crime, or misfortune, or worse.

How little we know of each other. The woman of fashion who sneers At her sister whom fate has abandoned To poverty, misery, tears, May prove ere the sun rise to morrow More deeply immersed in disgrace. And the sadness sneered at in another Be pictured upon her own face.

How little we know of each other. Of our own hearts how little we know. We are all feeble under temptation, Be our station in life high or low. Ah! then let sweet charity rule us, And help one another to win The crown that awaits those who strive for Avoidance of shame and sin.

it Will Make Thee Work. "I drink to make me work," said a young man one day. To which an old man replied: "That's right; thee drink and it will make thee work. Hearken to me a moment, and Ill tell thee something that may do thee good. I was once a prosperous farmer. I had a good, loving wife and two : s fine lade as ever the sun shone on. We nad a comfortable home and lived happily together, but we used to drink ale to make us work. Those two lads I laid in drunkards' graves. My wife died broken-hearted, and she now lies by her two sons. I am 72 years of age. Had it not been for drink I might have been an independent gentleman; but I used to drink to make me work, and, mark, it makes me work now. At 72 years of age, I am obliged to work for my daily bread. Drink and it Then one man rose up and said, "This pleases." Another said, "My friends, do you not know that this harmless looking serway of the serpent, lest they be bitten." This counsel seemed to impress the assembly very favorably. Then a third speaker began in this wise, "Since the bite of this reptile is so very dangerous, I would submit that it might be well to make certain rules and reover, that he shall not be let out of his cage until a council of citizens shall so decide; and, finally," said this wise and thoughtful man, "I suggest that an oath be administered Her warning came too late.
