A Pig Tale. As requested my friends,

Now a tale I'll relate, Of a troublesome pig, And his tragical fate. Well, two bachelor chaps In the woods did reside And their clearing about them Was not very wide. In a cabin they lived, Sir, Constructed of logs,

And their stock did consist of A twelfth dozen hoge; Or a hundred they had just, Save ninty and nine, But they found they had Plenty to terd to of swine. Sure a pig they must have,

With their 'taters, for grub sir, Out there in the wood: Sa a pen they constructed For piggy hard by, As they thought he'd be company There in his sty; Then they purchased a pig.

In a bag brought him out, And they emptied him into His sty with a shout. "Hurrah! for our pig, What a comfort he'll be! There is nothing like raising

But they found him some Trouble, this beautiful beast, On the which they looked Forward in Winter to feast. For this pig was determined To eat a good deal.

> As for piggy's inspection it Dearly would pay.

Not a button he'd leave, sir,

O that pig! was the cussedest

Though 'Twas little he cared

For the dimes or the cents.

When beguiled with a bucket

Of swill he was caught,

To his quarters was got.

What a tussle and squalling

And clamor there'd be.

Ere he'd loose under protest,

How they sighed for lost freedom;

Thence, at home one must stay,

They could not both roam,

Always one must be tethered

For the pig must be fed and

With piggy at home.

Though abroad business

Not fast a whole day.

What a time ere he back

On coat, pants or vest.

A real, true, hearty, happy boy is about the best thing that we know of, unless it is a real girl, and there is not much to choose between them. A real boy may be a sincere lover of the Lord Jesus Christ, even if he cannot lead the prayer meeting, or be a church officer, or a preacher, but he can te a godly boy in a boy's way and place. He is apt to be noisy and full of fun, and there is nothing wrong about that. He ought not to be too solemn or too quiet for a boy. He need not cease to be a boy because he is a Christian. He ought to run, jamp, climb, and shout like a real boy. But in all he eught to show the spirit of Christ. He ought to be free from vulgarity and profanity.
