"I Can Take Care of Myself." This is the favorite answer of the heady. high minded and reckless, who propose to disregard good counsel and follow the devices of their own heart. A young man, when warned againt strong drink, says: "I am able to take care of myself." But it is frequently the case that before the end of his career he needs two or three policemen, a number of sheriffs, constables, lawyers, judges, jailors, turnkeys, and sometimes a hangman to take care of him. He is by no means so in-
