Perth Parish S. S. Convention.

The quarterly session of Perth Parish S. S. ance of Atkinson has nothing to do, so far as Convention, was held at the school house, Centre Perth, on Monday last, and notwithstanding the very unfavorable condition of the weather last sentence, he only showed really what the very unfavorable condition of the weather and roads was largely attended, representatives being present from the most distant schools in the Parish. The convention met at 2 p. m., the President, G. T. Baird, M. P. P., presiding. After singing, and prayer by Rev. D. Fiske, S. J. Parsons taught a very interesting lesson. Then followed most cheering reports from the several superintendents present, each reporting an increasing interest in the work, not only in the schools, but throughout their several communities. It was decided to hold their next ression of the convention, in the Baptist church, Lower Perth, on the first Friday in October.

The evening session opened at 7 when the rehool house was packed to its fullest capacity by an eager and enthusiastic au lience. The excises began with excellent singing, Miss Berthal Craig at the organ, followed by prayer by James Watts. The President then in a brief address introduced Rev. D. Fiske, who delivered address introduced Rev. D. Fiske, who delivered address introduced Rev. D. Fiske, who delivered a most practical speech on "Helps, their use and shuse." Then calling up a class of little boys and girls, the President, in a very happy manner, proceeded to teach the lesson of Blind Bartimeus. This proved a very pleasing and instructive feature of the evening's programme. James Watts then spoke on the object of S. S. work. David Law made some some pertinent remarks, and then followed a profitable season of question asking and answering. The exercises were interspersed with singing which, was of no mean order. There was much in the season of no mean order of the season of the seaso

To the Editors of the Carleton Sentinel:

Under the above heading C. O. D. begins a communication. He seems to decire to have the present government given credit for the Florenceville bridge, and afterwards wishes credit given to one of our representatives at that time, Mr. Leighton. When the new one was formed he soon began to support the old government, and when the new one was formed he soon began to support it. C. O. D. calls him "a practical man." No doubt, he secured a good position for himself. An eminently practical man is Mr. Leighton—practical enough to look out for No. 1. Does he mean that the Florenceville bridge was the price of Leightyn's support of the new government? or what does he mean by "Leighton who knew enough to keep in a position where he could effectively work for the people's interest." The present government constructed the bridge. If the bridge was needed by the County, it was only right is should be built. It is a good thing to have a bridge there, or at any place along the river. Still if it were not needed it is no credit to have obtained it as the price of our support. If it were necessary there is no special reason why credit should be given by the fact to have obtained it as the price of our support. If it were necessary there is no special reason why credit should be given by the fact to have obtained it as the price of our support. If it were necessary there is no credit to have obtained it as the price of our support. If it were necessary there is no credit to have obtained it as the price of our support. If it were necessary there is no credit to have obtained it as the price of our support. If it were necessary there is no credit to have obtained it as the price of our support. If it were necessary there is no credit to have obtained it as the price of our support. If it were necessary there is no credit to have obtained it as the price of our support. If it were necessary there is no credit to have obtained it as the price of our support. If it were necessary there is no support. If it were necessary there is no special reason why credit should be given the government. That would imply that they did not usually build a necessary public work. C. O. D. perhaps may remember that J. S. Leighton represented the County of Carleton a number of years in the House of Assembly, eight or twolve years or more of Assembly, eight or twelve years or mere, I do not know exactly how many. This "practical man," then in that time achieved

"practical man," then in that time achieved the wonderful success of having a necessary bridge built. There is some hope for the present members yet. Perhaps when the government begins to build another $100,000 bridge (as they did at Fredericton in J. S. Leighton's time) they may be able to get about 1-10 or 1 20 as much for a bridge at, say, Hardand. I think that is about what Leighton did. C. O. D. discusses the position of one of our present representatives Dr. Atkins n. He was elected to support the present government. Mr. Leighton was elected to support, I believe, the old government, I believe, yet in a short time we find him supporting the Blair government. Does C.O.D. remember the reforms the Blair of the opposition advocoted? He would obslish the Legislative Council reduce the number of Executive Councillors, reduce the expenses of legislation, keep the scats of the Legislative Council filled and wou'd generally retrench and economize.

At first the Rhis recomment had a mall At first the Blair government had a small majority, and an active opposition and peo-ple naturally expec ed he would require time to carry out his reforms. After the last general election there was no opposition. Having had time and now having complete control of the House of Assembly is it unfair for the electors to expect Mr. Blair to carry out all reforms advocated previously by him? Does he do so? Name a single one. Behold his expressives regarding the Levilletics Company of the restriction. he do so? Name a single one. Behold his earnestness regarding the Lexislative Council! With an increased revenue he reduced the grant to teachers. The people have to make it up by direct taxation. The expenses of legislation have increased $20,000 under his regime. Has he reduced the number of the Executive? All these he has not done.

Let up look at some of his acts.

With an increased revenue, he requires to withdraw the capital of the province at the rate of hundreds of thousands. What for? To build the Fredericton bridge $100,000 or $150,000, Departmental Buildings at Fredericton $50,000, a line of railway connecting two towns which has already two lines of railway and a navigable river for means of communication; this third railway between Fredericton and Woodstock to cost $200.000. Is Mr. Blair not a "practical man?" If the other representative for Carleton and a few others would take the same course Dr. Atkinson has taken, Hen. Mr. Blair would not be able to spend so much of the capital Let us look at some of his acts.

Atkinson has taken, Hen. Mr. Blair would not be able to spend so much of the capital of the province in York County. Now, as to the position of Atkinson. No doubt he expected the Blair of the present government to bear some slight relation to opposition Blair, i. e. it is only natural for him and every elector to expect the present government (with no organized opposition) to fulfill the promises and perform the reforms promised by the leader when in opposition. Another cause of difference is the railway policy. Dr. Atkinson opposed voting $200,000 to a third railway between Fredericton and Woodsteck, but Atkinson does not oppose government aid to railways, but, as he pose government aid to railways, but, as he stated in the House last Winter, he claims Stated in the House last Winter, he claims that when a proposed railway has obtained a Dominion subsidy, the Provincial Government should subsidize it also. That appears a reasonable policy. When the people of the other provinces are willing to aid us in constructing a railway, surely we should do our part. On this question Atkinson opposed the Government. At the time Mr. Blair made a violent attack and charged Atkinson with not being in earnest and with not having asked the government to aid any railways. Atkinson showed documentary evidence of the falseness of the Attorney General's statements, whereupon Queen St., Woodstock, N. B. Attorney General's statements, whereupon he took refuge under the subterfuge that a resolution should have been tabled by Atkinson. There was much in the session to encourage and inspire, and there are, probably, few parishes in the Province, where there is greater interest manifested in Sabbath School work than in Perth.
