How sorry one would be for a man who, starting out upon a journey, had his pockets full of golden coid, which one by one had slipped through the same unmended hole or rent, so that when he came to the end of his trip he had not not one left, but lay down upon his bed a beggar. How strictly we had slipped through the same to the end of his trip he had not not one left, but lay down upon his bed a beggar. How strictly we have the globe, provided the locometric can recommend Hagyard's knowledge every day. Make few promises, and speak the truth. Give full measures and weigh with a just balance. Consent to common customs, but not to common folly. Be cautious of believing ill, but more cautious of reporting it. Have courage to wear your old clothes until you can pay for new ones. Think of heaven with hearty purpose and stong hope to get there. Do good to all, that you mayst keep thy friends and gain thine enemies. Count your resources;
