On Conditions. A. F. Cox, a shoe manufacturer in Port-land, Me, was once appealed to, to contri-bute for the purpose of assisting people who were suffering for want of bread. He said:— "Yes, I will contribute. If you will find any man in Portland who does not keep a og, and who does not use rum or tobacco who is in want of bread, I will give him a sack of flour and a bushel of meal.

The offer was made public to some one, and at a meeting in the Oity Hall, the question was asked by one of the citizens, "How long will you stand to that?"

He replied he would stand to that to the extent of a hundred sacks of flour and a hundred bushels of meal. But to the surprise of the people not a single person has prise of the people not a single person has ever appeared to claim the flour and meal
