(For The Carleton Sentinel) In Memory of Charles H. Woolverton. You miss to-night the lovely boy Who once made glad your home, And think, with bitter grief, of all The lonely days to come. Your thoughts turn back to days of yore,

When he was but a child, And lisped to you his evening prayer In simple accents mild. How fondly then you gazed on him And thought, with mother's joy, That God was very good to give To you this precious boy. You look back o'er the forty years That he was spared to you, And memory brings, in colors bright, His loving deeds to view.

And then you bow, in sorrow deep, And cry, in anguish wild, That God in Heaven was unkind To take from you your child. But think not thus, lone heart, in this Thy darkest, saddest day, For hark! from out the realms of bliss I hear the angels say: -"He now is led in pastures green,

By living waters, pure, And he is drinking in the joys That ever shall endure. "He walks in raiment of pure white, For he is worthy now; And God has placed the fadeless crown Of life upon his brow.

Shall ever pierce the soul, But he shall dwell in peece and joy While endless ages roll. "Look up, dear heart, and do not grieve— On Christ thy burden cast, For He can calm the heaving sea And still the raging blast. "Thine earthly race with patience run, Thy cross with meekness bear; And, when the triumphs all are won,

"No chilly blast of earthly wind

The victor's crown thou'lt wear. Selegt Tale.

A LOCOMOTIVE HERO.

Well, gentlemen, if you wish it, I'll tell you the story. When I was a youth of 19 and lived with my parents in a Pennsylvania town, I had a taste for especially with a driver named Silas Markley. I became much attached to this man, notwithstanding he was forty I shouted, 'you are running this train years old, and by no means a sociable into the jaws of death.'

When Markley's fireman left him I induced him to let me take his place during the remainder of my vaca-tion. He hesitated for some time before he consented to honor my boyish whim, but he finally yielded and I was in great glee. The fact was that in my idleness and in the ovorworked state of my brain I craved the excitement as a confirmed drunkard does liquor, and besides, I had such longing dreams of the fiery ride brough the hills, mounted literally on the iron horse. So I became an expert fireman, and liked it exceedingly, for the excitement more than compensated for Please give me a call and be con- day formed a plan which seemed to give down to Philadelphia in the train with-out letting him know anything about -48-tf it, and there purchase a present for him She took me into her confidence and had me to assist her. Since then old, walked from Prague to Berlin, where he claim the right to bring all the above evils on I have understood how it is that dull, ignorant men, without a spark of enthusiasm, show much heroism as soldiers, firemen, and captains of wrecked vessels. It is this over-powering sense of routine duty. It's a finer thing than sheer bravery, in my idea. However, I have to think that Markley was mad, laboring under some frenzy from drink, though I had never seen him touch liquor. He did not move hand or foot except his eyes going from the gage to the time- N. Once he glared back at the long train sweeping after the engine with a headlong speed that rocked it from side to side.

One could imagine he saw hundreds of men and women in the carriages, talking, reading, smoking, unconscious that their lives were all in the hand of one man whom I now strongly suspected to be railroading and a boyish ambition to be- mad. 'Yes, I think so.' Yes, I think so.'

I said nothing. I threw on coal; if I had had petroleum I should have thrown it on. But I never was calmer in my life. When death actually stares a man in the face it often frightens him into the most perfect composure. Markley pushed the valve still further. The engine began to give a strange panting sound. Far off to the south I could see the bituminous black smoke of a train.

An incident occurred at the Queen s draw ing-room on Tuesday which has excited a good deal of comment. As Mr. W. H. White, Secretary of the American Legation, ap proached Her Majesty, a portion of her head dress, including the diminutive crown she wore, fell to the floor. The effect upon those who witnessed it was bewildering and for a full minute no one seemed to know what to do. The ornament was finally replaced, but the bituminous black smoke of a train.—
