WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)

Washington, Feb. 11th, 1889.

The House of Representatives was crowded with a buzzing, bustling, curious throng on Wednesday, to see Congress count the electral votes. It was I o'clock when the Senator Ingells took his seat beside Speaker Carlisle. Mr. Ingalls dived into the bux containing the certificates, and, after a jumble of words, solemnly broke the seals of the returns from Alabama. Nothing wonderful encued but it took over too minutes to read the report, which Senator Manderson delivered. So on it went, Senstor Harris reading the report from Arkaness next. Oscasionally amouement was had, as when Senator Harris, by a slip of the tongue announced the vot of Indiana for Ulcevland, but takes as whole the proceeding was about as uneventful as could be. Still the curious listened with little sign of being bored, and, indeed, almost in a spirit of wise sew, as partaking of a very dignified and judicial feast of reson. Sinnot legalls treated the matter with his usual disregard for the theatrical. Then if he goes back on his word and continues in the evil traffic, you still have the strong arm of the law over his bead, and I would be among the first to say let its severest pensity be inflicted. Of course, the vexed instance that the Republicans expect to make the most capital of is the murder of John M. Clayton in Arkansas. That this was a political murder no one doubts, and while no party is to be held responsible for the action of a few misguided and obscure members, it has deeply affected the good name of the State and ruined the reputation of Representative Breckinridge, the late Mr. Clayton's opponent for Congress.

The House will to-morrow receive Mr. Springer's report of the bill he introduced last month, to enable the Territories of Ari-

It is not prolican majority in the Senate. It is not proposed by the bill to admit the three new States so promptly as the five S stes proposed in the Omnibus bill which passed the House, but it provides that they can be in the Union in time to vote in the Presidential election of 1892. LONDON, Feb. 19 .- In the Parnell com The cross examination of Mr. Macdonald, manager of the Times, was continued. Many inconsistencies in his testimony were brought out, seriously weakening the Times' case. Witness was asked to give the names of persons who wrote the articles on Parnellism and Crime, as many are now said to have had a hand in the book. He declined to give the names of contributors to the papers as at present advised. "'Twas contrary to the policy of the Times to make public names of writers." "Twas contingent," Judge Hannen said.
