Scaly Skin Diseases

Psoriasis 5 years, covering face, head, and entire body with white scabs. Skin red, itchy, and bleeding. Hair all gone. Spent hundreds of dollars. Pronounced incurable. Cured by Cuticura Remedies.

Cured by Cuticura

My disease (psoriasis) first broke out on my left cheek, spreading across my nose, and almost covering my face. I ran into my eyes, and the physician was afraid I would lose my eyesight altogether. It spread all over my head, and my hair all fell out, until I was entirely bald-headed; it then broke out on my arms and shoulders, until my arms were just one sore. It covered my entire body, my face, head, and shoulders being the worst. The white scabs fell constantly from my head, shoulders, and arms; the skin would thicken and be red and very itchy, and would crack and bleed if scratched. After spending many hundreds of dollars, I was pronounced incurable. I heard of the CUTICURA REMEDIES and after using two bottles of CUTICURA RESOLVENT, I could see a change; and after I had taken four bottles, I was almost cured; and when I had used six bottles of CUTICURA RESOLVENT and one box of CUTICURA, and one cake of CUTICURA SOAP, I was cured of the dreadful disease from which I had suffered for five years. I thought the disease would leave a very deep scar, but the CUTICURA REMEDIES cured it without any scars. I cannot express with a pen what I suffered before using the CUTICURA REMEDIES. They saved my life, and I feel it my duty to recommend them. My hair is restored as good as ever, and so is my eyesight. I know of others who have received great benefit from their use.

About the Sidewalk Bill.

To the Editors of the Carleton Sentinel:

Mr. White is not inclined to discuss the Sidewalk Bill, and presents a very poor excuse; however, we are glad to know that he has discovered that he was addressing an intelligent audience; perhaps his remarks might have been otherwise had he taken that fact into consideration at the time.

Again thanking you for your valuable space,

RAMBLES IN THE LEVANT.

BY FRANK S MILBURY, M. D.

Letter No 2.

Stamboul, its Mosques, Bazaars Etc.

Editors Sentinel,—

This being mostly inhabited by the Turks, is naturally the most Oriental looking part of the old city, but of late years western civilization is showing its marks in the shape of one or two fairly good pavements, street railways and other things. By this time we are at the old Seraglio on the summit of the hill, which still contains some beautiful examples of ornamental brick and marble work, and the grey battlemented towers, draped and festooned with creepers, great tufts of vegetation, wild fig trees and cactus springing from the clefts in the walls. At the gateway in front of the Seraglio is the handsome fountain built by Sultan Ahmed III. It contains some beautiful ornamental work in different colored stone, harmonising in an exquisite manner, and the lovely gilt metal work cannot be excelled in modern times. The Sultan himself composed the inscription which translated reads thus: "This fountain reveals to thee its age in these lines by the Sultan Ahmed. Open the source of this pure and tranquil water in the name of the Almighty, drink of the ever flowing fountain, and give a prayer for the soul of Sultan Ahmed."

Now we go to the wonderful mosque of Saint Sophia, one of the most interesting buildings of the world; and I assure you of this city there is so much to describe I hardly know where to begin, and the same applies to the mosque, as I fear I cannot do it justice, but here goes for a trial at least. There are about 200 mosques in Constantinople, but this is the largest in the world and specially visited by tourists. Accompanied by our Mohammedan dragoman (guide) we proceeded to this immense structure and were soon at the entrance, but were not permitted to enter with our boots on as the place is too holy for a christian's leather; to overcome this difficulty a light pair of overshoes was provided for each; even the Mohammedans remove their boots and go in stocking or bare feet, or place their overshoes on. Christian's must always put on shoes provided, as their stockings or even bare feet polute the sanctity of the place. This was built as a christian church in the sixth century. Artists were collected from far and near, and over one hundred architects superintended the work, and 10,000 laborers worked at the same time and were paid every evening in silver, and even with so many men it took 5 years for completion. The mortar was scented with musk and it is said that to day, after a lapse of so many centuries, one may detect the odor, but I must say that my smelling organs were not sufficiently acute to notice it. To raise money for the undertaking, heavy taxes were imposed, and rich presents flowed in from every quarter, but still the riches of the East could hardly bear the strain. It has doors of cedar of Lebanon, inlaid with gold, silver, ivory and amber, and its altar was made of precious stones set in rich metals. Its pillars are made of bronze, of the richest marbles, Lapis Lazuli, Sardonyx, Porphery, etc., many of which were taken from the temple of Diana at Ephesus near Smyrna, from Athens, Rome, Venice, Alexandria. Imagine yourself in a structure covering more than an acre, planted with a perfect forest of columns and roofed with a splendid dome, and enough mozaic work left to cover a half acre field; suspend thousands of lamps between the dome and floor, scatter richly carved desks or pulpits, with their lovely divans and elegant Turkish carpets about various parts of the building, the preacher sitting cross legged on the divans, reading from the koran or talking to many groups of men and women in their picturesque dress, squatted cross legged on the matting and beautiful carpets with which the floor is covered. The men and women are always in separate clusters, each before its respective dervish. A dozen or more services may go on at the same time in a quiet tone without interfering with each other. Put immense fountains here and hang gigantic inscriptions there, one will have some idea how Saint Sophia looks on entering it. A person may wander a long time through the corridors, finding new beauties at every step. I had much difficulty in keeping my outer shoes in place, and often one of the attendants would look daggers at me as much as to say "take care, sir! it won't do for your unholy shoes to touch these carpets," and even with all the caution possible I am afraid they did several times. We wished to go into the gallery, but it was no go. At night we again paid a visit and this time by the liberal use of backsish, attained our object—a visit to the gallery. A lovely scene now presents itself, the thousands of lamps all lighted, great stars and wreaths of flame float in the air between the dome and the floor; when every pillar, alcove and corridor are ablaze, and when the various galleries are walled with flame, the mosque takes on a new grandeur, which added to the picturesqueness of the worshippers themselves make a night in Saint Sophia one of the greatest sights of the world. The worshippers numbered some thousands, and were all kneeling on their knees with their faces towards Mecca. In turbans and gowns, with their bare or stockinged feet, looking up at the gallery, they formed long lines of curious color on the white mats away down under the floating flame. The Imman was preaching in a shrill voice which appeared to penetrate to the remotest recesses of the vast mosque, and in response to which these thousands rose and fell in perfect harmony in their devotions, and when their knees struck the floor it sounded like the rumbling of distant thunder, and when they bowed their heads to the floor the sound came up as though made by the fall of some great weight rather than by the touching of thousands of foreheads. In front of each worshipper was placed his shoes and at the close of the service each Mohammedan took these in his hands and walked with them out of the church. The prayers and methods are all regulated by the koran, and no matter how many thousands may be together they all pray the same and go through the same manoeuvers. If he is a faithful son of Mohamet, he will pray five times daily, not caring what his surroundings are: at the hours of prayer, whether in the street, on the steamer, at business, visiting or what not, at that moment he leaves all else, bows upon his knees, with his face towards Mecca, and will not be disturbed on any account, even if he were to lose thousands of dollars by it—this has been proved in several instances. They are proud of their religion and you may count their conversions to christianity by dozens, they are so few. Missionaries out here have told me that it is almost impossible to make any impression upon them, and their work is chiefly confined to other classes. Christians may learn many useful lessons from their sincere devotion.

Horrible Murder.

QUEBEC, Feb. 24.—A terrible murder occurred yesterday at St Albans, some forty miles above Quebec. A man named Dubois, in a fit of the wildest rage occasioned by jealously, seized an axe and murdered his wife, his mother-in-law and his two children, aged four years and two months respectively.

During the day the neighbors, suspecting something extraordinary had occurred to the inmates of the dwelling on account of the deadly stillness that prevailed around, entered the building, and to their utter dismay beheld the mangled and bleeding bodies of Mrs. Dubois, wife of the murderer, and of Mrs. Olympe Thibault, his mother-in-law, lying on the floor with their skulls open and smashed to a jelly. Their bosoms were open and the entrails were hanging out, and their brains were scattered about the place in pools of blood. But the horrors ended not there. Opening a door that led to a bedroom the searchers discovered the bodies of the two children, also cut and torn in a most barbarous manner. The two-months-old baby was entirely beheaded, while another cut exhibited the heart and lungs. The elder boy, as he lay on a bed appeared to have died in terrible agony. His legs were hacked to pieces and the body showed indications of having been struck repeatedly before receiving the fatal blow.

The news spread like wild-fire among the parishioners of St. Albans and possess were organized in pursuit of the fiend. He was arrested late last night in a wood by a man name Naud, and he is held in custody until the arrival of the provincial police, who are now on their way to the scene of the murder. Coroner Belleau has also gone to St Albans to hold an inquest on the bodies of the victims. The opinion of the people of St. Albans is that Dubois was jealous of his wife, who, however, gave him no cause to be jealous of her and enjoyed a good reputation in the county of Port Neuf, but Dubois, the murderer, was considered a dangerous character and has several times acted unmanly towards his wife, by ill treating her. He had also a grudge against the mother-in-law, whom he accused of conniving clandestinely to his prejudice. The news of the murder caused considerable excitement in Quebec and a large crowd will be at the arrival of the C. P. R. train, which conveys the murderer here.
