last had left the room the detective pointedly asked the lady of the house if he had seen all the servants, and she assored him that she had, but added as an afterthought, "I have not called my lady's maid, as she has been with me for two years, and I know that there can be nothing against her." However, the officer begged of her ladyship to be allowed to see the maid, and she was called. Directly the girl entered the room the detective slipped on her wrists a pair of handcuffe, saying, as he did so, "Well, Bill, we have run you to earth at last." The trim and attractive lady's maid turned out to be a man in disguise, who had been "wanted" by the police fer some time.
