Good-Bye. God Bless You. I like the Augle-Saxon speech With its direct revealings:

It takes a hold and seems to reach Far down into your feelings; That some folk deem it rude, I know, And therefore they abuse it; But I have never found it so, Before all else I choose it.

I don't object that men should air The Gallic they have paid for, With "au revoir," "adieu, ma chere,"
For that's what French was made for. But when a crony takes your hand At parting to address you, He drops all foreign lingo and He says: "Good by, God bless you!"

This seems to me a sacred phrase With reverence impassioned; A thing come down from righteousdays, Quaintly, but nobly fashioned. It well becomes an honest face, A voice that's round and cheerful; It stays the sturdy in his place
And soothes the weak and fearful.

Into the porches of the ears
It steals with subtle unction, And in your heart of hearts appears To work its gracious function; And all day long with pleasing song It lingers to caress you. I'm sure no human heart goes wrong That's told, "Good by, God bless you

I love the word, perhaps, because When I was leaving mother, Standing, at last, in solemn pause, We looked at one another; And I, I saw in mother's eyes The love she could not tell me, A love eternal as the skies Whatever fate befell me. She put her arms about my neck And soothed the pain of leaving, And, though her heart was like to break, She spoke no word of grieving;

She let no tear bedim ber eye,

For fear that might distress me;

But, kissing me, she said good by, And asked cur God to bless me. - Eugene Field, Chicago Daily Neu Selegt Tale.

The morning,

'There, Nan, is something for you to begin on. I'll send him out tomorrow.'

Do we call it dying when the buds bursts into flower?

Let no one be discouraged because his time is fully occupied. An industrious man's odd minutes are worth more than a lazy man's all day.

I don't believe I'll go in, after all,' he muttered. What do she care about me and my headaches now?' and he turnded back; but the idea of his steaming.

Plenty is as distinct from matter to its blossom-lady, mother of the Dac d'Abrantes, who has been for several months engaged in Eastern travel. After having visited Babylon and Nineveh she traversed the Persian deserts, amid terrible privations, in order to reach India. For five days and nights her little caravan had to encomp in the wilds without meeting a living soul, or even discovering the slightest trace of a human being. During all this time the cold was so intense that Mme, le Ray's could supply Woodstock, Fredericton and St.
