Dec. 14, 1891.

A movement has been in agitation for some time past among the Methodists of this section to erect a Methodist church somewhere in the neighborhood. The movement of late gathered strength. Meetings were held, the sense of the people was taken, a building committee was organized of the leading men, the site was fixed upon, estimates were made, and all necessary resolutions for carrying on the work were passed. It appears now that there is a slight division among the principes—not that we for one moment suppose any reasoning has arisen amonget them, which of them shall be greatest, but simply because, as it always happens in such cases, every one wants to have the church at his own door, and some are holding out tempting inducements towards a change of site. Our friend Mr. Hurst, one of the leading men of the Methodist communion here, generously offers, we understand, to put a thousand dollars into the building if committee will move the site to another point farther up the hill. Move the site, gentlemen, and take the thousand dollars into the building if committee will move the site, gentlemen, and take the thousand dollars into the building if committee will move the site, gentlemen, and take the thousand dollars into the building if committee will move the site, gentlemen, and take the thousand dollars into the building if committee will move the site to another point farther up the hill.
