The Old Hymn.

The splendid church was full of light;

A stream of music thrilled last night.

The windows and the doors were open

And all along the moonlit street

And falling on his helpless knees Heard Jesus, lover of my Soul.

It's thirty years since last he heard

The cadence of that anthem sweet

Alone upon that lonely street.

They sang the splendid hymn with grace,
E'en children's voices swelled the song,

And down his dragged and stricken face

Then wandered onward with a sigh.

Came slowly forth and haunted him.
