After a dull, cloudy season of nine days, interspersed with rain, the sun came out in all his glory and brightness on the morning of Dominion Day and cheered the hearts of many who looked forward with grand anticipations to a day of pleasure, recreation and evjoyment. Arrangements for the day's sport had been well executed and everything came off to perfection, without doubt giving satisfection to the thousands of visitors who thronged our streets during the day. The greater number of the Celestials themselves went out of town yet the city presented a lively appearance. The program of sports included a lacross match, base ball games, bicycle races, hose races, bazar, band concerts, etc., etc., not to mention the numerous private picnics and
