Poetry.

Would tempt me not the price to pay

For thy dear life was all to me-

Was life itself; and now with thee

My darling boy, my broken heart Is buried from the world apart.

'Twas hard, so hard to have thee die,

So hard to say the last "good bye,"
The open grave to stand beside,
And thy loved form to it confide;

To know that one so true, so fair,

Oh, God: my boy, my darling boy! Can life be lived without its joy?

Oh angel guides! conduct above His spirit mild, while I in love Each night recite, on bended knee,

Beside his grave, my rosary.
