Poetry. (Published by Request)

I miss you, my darling my darling, The embers burn low on the hearth; And still is the stir of the household, And hushed is the voice of its mirth; The rain splashes fast on the terrace, The winds past the lattices moan,
The midnight chimes out from the minster
And I am alone.

I went you, my derling, my derling, I'm tired with care and with fret; would nestle in silence beside you, And all but your presence forget,
In the bush of the happiness given
To those who through trusting have grown To the fulness of love in contentment : But I am alone.

I call you, my darling, my darling!
My voice echoes back on the heart; I stretch my arms to you in longing,
And, lo! they fall empty apart;
I whisper the sweet words you taught me,
The words that we only have known,
Till the blank of the dumb air is bitter, For I am slone.

I need you, my darling, my darling!
With its yearning my very heart aches;
The load that divides us weighs harder; I shrink from the jar that it makes, Old doubts make my spirit their owa, O, come through the darkness and save m

According to geologists it must be surface. According to geologists it must be surface.

Sirs,—I have great reason to speak well of your B. B. Bitters. I have taken 6 bottles for myself and family and find that for loss of appetite and weakness it has no equal. It cures sick headache, purifies the blood and will not fail when used. I heartily recommend it to all he does not uphold it. It is to be hoped the wanting a pure medicine. believes in Boodle and Pacaudism
