Poetry.

The Last Shall be First.

Who would not haste to do some mighty thing,

If safe occasion gave it to his hand, Knowing that at its close his name would ring,

Coupled with praises, through a grateful land?

Who would not hear with joy some great

Bidding him dare to earn a glorious name? The tack is easy that secures us fame.

Our hourly toil but seeks the means to live; Our dull monotonous labor knows no plan

Save that which stern necessity doth give. Our earnings fill an ever leaking sieve;

Our tack fulfilled, another still succeeds, And brief neglect brings overgrowth of weeds.

What wonder, then, if suffering men repine

And helplessness gives way to mad despair? Some murmur at, yea, curse, the scheme divine,

Across their brows a deepening channel wear,

Oh, fools and blind! This world is not the goal,

But shapes us for a larger world unknown,

The vilest slave that keeps a patient soul,
Shall yet rank higher than the sensual drone
Who seeks to please his worthless self alone,
If humbled toil be hardest, yet be true,
He most shall merit who can most endure.

We Behold their Workings and Stand

How doth the lovely Dismond Dyes Improve the days and hours, By giving profit and surprise, To those who test their powr's.

How skilfully they do their work At morning, noon and night.
On dresses, jackets, wraps and suits,
To every one's delight.

They spread their colors like a charm In shades both dark and gay There's nothing 'bou' them that can harm. Or cause the least dismay.

A child can with the greatest case These lovely colors use, Can get results that always please-

That no one can refuse. This lesson then is surely fraught With hints so true and wise It was, if you would n'er be caught,

You must use Diamond Dyes. As an instance showing the "ruling passion The longest cataleptic sleep known to medstrong in jail," it is mentioned that a man ical science has been attracting attention in who was committed on a charge of burglary and larceny was released from the Paris jail on bail, the other day, and after he had gone the jailer found that he had wound a blanket around his body under his clothing and worn hair has grown, but his beard has remained
