Good Advice

Bishop Sweeny in the Cathedral, St. John, on Sunday morning, recently advised that men instead of crowding into cities and going away to other lands should settle down in the country, where they are always sure at least of a home and the means of subsistence. He contrasted the life of the hard working laborer in the cities with that of the farmer, Bradley, District of Columbia. and showed how much better off in every way the latter is. He pointed to the example of Johnville, in Carleton county, and the French Settlement, in Kent, proof of what he said, and he urged men who have to earn their bread by the sweat would not be far better off if setiled in
