How a Boy Saved His Futher. A boy thirteen years of age, attending one of our mission schools, was, as we believe, converted. His father was a very dissipated, wicked man, and kept a drinking calcon. He not only got drunk himself, but would sell to others and make them drunk.

This dear boy asked his Sunday School teacher what he should do; that his father would make him wait on the handing out the liquor to them, and if he had not better leave home. His teacher advised him not to leave home, but to commence at once and pray for hie father, and she would pray for him and his father also. They began to supplicate the throne of grace daily for that father. In a few weeks be quit drinking, and declared he would not of drink any more, and some two weeks ago be met the superintendent and informed him that he had quit selling whicky and gone to hard work to earn an honest living. They often show and practise great deception - great word and action - strange as it may sound to optimists—they often show that they are actuated by evil influences. In their little dealings with each other, and even in their pastimes, we often get a glimpse of the little cloven foot of cunning and selfishnece; and a thoughtleseness, utterly regardnothing of cocasional spurts of cruelty-is not so very rare as to excite surprise. Uther injurious weede often flo urieb, even loxueiantly, in the child mind, and must sli be carefully rooted out to prevent the choking of those better qualities, the nurture, growth and flourishing of which will make our young o ive plants shoot up into plants of renown-will make the young wise and neaful members of society hereafter. These ita-pertant points were graphically and elo-quently dwelt upon and ably illustrated by Rev. J. R. Lode (Presb) in his powerful address, at the late evening meeting at Grand
