Poetry.

At the Turn of the Road.

Where the rough road runs and the valley sweet
Smiles bright with its balm and bloom,
We'll forget the thorns that have pierced the feet
And the nights with their grief and gloom,
And the sky will smile, and the stars will beam,
And we'll lay us down in the light to dream.

We shall lay us down in the bloom and light
With a prayer and a tear for rest,
As tired children who creep at night
To the love of a mother's breast,
And for all the grief of the stormy past,
Rest shall be sweeter at last—at last!

Sweeter because of the weary way
And the lonesome night and long,
While the darkness drifts to the perfect day
With its splendor of light and song.
The light that shall bless us and kiss us and love us
And sprinkle the roses of heaven above us!

Select Tale.

CONTROLLED BY LOVE.

Maj. Hannibal Sparhawk was a born hero and a warrior. His spirit was martial and commanding

He stood six feet two in his stockings and turned the beam of a true and trusted Fairbanks at 210 pounds avoirdupois.

He was the acknowledged leader of his party in our town and his party was in the ascendant.

The Major was not quarrelsome, but he was opinionated and unyielding. He was too big a man to quarrel and too conscious of his own powers to yield a point in anything.

Maj Sparhawk had lived a bachelor to the age of 40. At length, however, the erotic dart touched his heart and he offered to take a wife and make her mistress of the wife's appropriate department of his house.

Sylvia Aspen was a small, delicate woman, pretty and accomplished.

For several years she had taught the primary department of our common school, and the superintending committee were forced to acknowledge that by no other teacher had the scholars ever been so thoroughly governed as by her.

She had seen 30 years of life, and for reasons best known to herself she had refused all offers of marriage.

And now Maj. Hannibal Sparhawk offered her his hand and his heart.

'Miss Aspen,' he said in his blunt, dictatorial way, 'you have known me long enough and well enough to know something of the home I can provide. If you take me you will take a rough, blunt man who must be his own master through life.'

'I have my own peculiar views of the true marriage relation. The man is the head of the household. I can love and provide and protect; but I must be master. As I am I offer myself. You will not be deceived.'

Sylvia smiled one of her sweet eccentric smiles, and with her small white hand resting confidingly upon the major's arm, she told him she accepted the situation.

'You are sure?' he queried.

'I am sure of this,' she said, looking up into his face with candid fervor: 'I love you well enough to marry you; and as for domestic government, the result must be as the result is the world over—the weak must depend upon the strong.'

Hannibal Sparhawk kissed the little woman and assured her that he would never be tyrannical or unjust, and the day for the wedding was fixed.

People wondered when it was published, that Sylvia Aspen was to become the wife of Maj. Sparhawk.

'She'll be a slave and a drudge!' was the general opinion.

'You don't know what you are doing,' said a friend who had known the Major long and well. 'Hannibal Sparhawk will wear and fret the life out of you. He has the officers of his regiment at his house as often as once a week; and when they come they make a night of it.

It's dreadful the way they carry on; and the punch and the wine that is drunk and the tobacco that is smoked is beyond account. You don't think he will give up these things do you?'

In due time—in early autumn—Hannibal Sparhawk and Sylvia Aspen became man and wife.

The major had planned to have the wedding a grand affair—to have his military friends present in full panoply, with a full band of music and appropriate fixings; but Sylvia persuaded him not. She said but little—just enough to make him understand that it would please her to have it different, and he concluded to please her.

They had been married two weeks when the major proposed that he would invite the officers of his regiment to dinner—staff and line, about 50 of them.

'I suppose such a dinner means wine and tobacco, and plenty of it?' said Sylvia.

'Certainly,' responded her husband. When I invite my friends to my house I expect to treat them according to the fashion of the times.'

'Then, Hannibal, I would rather you did not invite them.'

The major laughed at the absurdity of his wife's whim. Sylvia was mild, but firm.

'Of course,' she said, with a smile, 'you will do in this matter as you please.'

'Of course—I will,' declared the husband, emphatically. 'You know what I told you in the beginning. I must be master of my own house.'

'But,' interposed Sylvia, with the sweetest smile imaginable, 'suppose I could show you that the greatest possible amount of comfort and joy you can find will come from pleasing me?'

'Eh?'

She kissed him and then ran away.

Already Maj. Hannibal Sparhawk felt a nipping at his ear, as though something were biting it.

Days and weeks passed and the officers of the grand old regiment were not invited to the proposed reunion at the major's.

It was whispered that his wife would not allow it; and yet, when the officers individually had occasion to call at the major's residence, Sylvia treated them so kindly and so considerately and bestowed upon them so much careful attention as friends of her husband, that they went away loud of her praise.

It was on a pleasant afternoon of the following spring that the social circle connected with our religious society met at the major's house. Late in the evening a knot of gentlemen were seated in the great oriel of the back parlor, while at the centre table, near by, were a few of the ladies at work.

In the oriel the conversation turned upon national affairs. Deacon Rich advanced an idea in opposition to the cherished political opinion of his host. The major was fired in a moment.

'I tell you, sir,' he exclaimed, smiting his huge fist upon his knee, 'the political sentiments which——'

Hark!

It was the tapping of a knitting needle upon the arm of Sylvia's chair. The major looked up and met the glance of his wife. He coughed and stammered, and then smiled as he said:

'We won't enter into a political discussion in the presence of ladies. At another time, deacon, I will give you my opinion upon the matter.'

On their way home Deacon Rich and Squire Lewis walked together.

'Well, deacon, what do you think now about poor little Sylvia's daring to say her soul's her own in the presence of her husband?'

'I am amazed,' confessed the deacon. 'Why bless me! She rules him with a rod of iron.'

'And yet,' suggested Lewis, 'he seems happy and contended.'

'Aye—and there's the wonder. I can't comprehend it—can you?'

'I think I can. There is one way, and one way only, in which a small, weak woman can entirely subjugate and control a brueque, herculean husband. The major is not governed against his will in fact, his wife does not directly govern him at all. She leads him to govern himself.'

Other people wondered as Deacon Rich wondered, for it was apparent to all that the doughty man of war and bluster had become a model husband.

The only man, perhaps, who did not wonder was the major himself. He was content with the prize he had gained Once a friend asked him if he was not governed by his wife.

'No, sir!' was his emphatic reply.

'But you do her bidding, nevertheless.'

'I do just what pleases me,' said the major, loftily; 'and if it pleases me to please my wife, whose business is it?—Boston Globe.

Father and Son.

The following letter was sent by a man to his son at college: 'My Dear Son, I write to send you some new socks, which your mother has just knit by cutting down some of mine. Your mother sends you ten pounds, without my knowledge, and for fear you would not spend it wisely I have kept back half, and only send you five. Your mother and I are well, except that your sister has got the measles, which we think would spread among the other girls if Tom had not had them before, and he is the only one left. I hope you will do honor to my teachings; if you do not, you are a donkey, and your mother and myself are your affectionate parents.'

One For the Turk.

One of the stories that drifted out of the plaisance is of the mosque where prayers were said daily at regular intervals for the natives. A pious woman passing accosted a young Oriental and chatting with him, finished with a nod toward his prayer house and the remark, 'I hope you go to Church every Sunday, like a Christian.' 'No,' was the quick reply, 'I go every day, like a Turk'—which must score one for the heathen.—New York Times.

Live for Something.

Do good, and leave behind you a monument of virtue that the storms of time can never destroy. Write your name in kindness, love and mercy on the hearts of thousands you come in contact with, year by year; you will never be forgotten—your name, your deeds, will be as legible on the hearts you leave behind as the stars on the brow of evening. Good deeds will shine as the stars of heaven.—Chalmers.

The Human Family.

The human family living on the earth to-day consists of about 1,450,000,000 souls—not fewer, probably more. These are distributed literally all over the earth's surface, there being no considerable spot on the globe where man has not found a foothold. The extremes of the blacks and whites are five to three, the remaining 700,000,000 intermediate, brown, yellow and tawny in color,

Weakness goes before wickedness, as pride is said to do before a fall; men become wicked because they are weak, and know not where their real strength lies; they are not strong or discerning enough to trust their best against and in preference to their worst. They begin to think and act for themselves alone, forgetful of the duty they owe to others, neglectful of the responsibilities that belong to their personal or official position; and then they leave the way of integrity for the wandering mazes of wrong.—Rev. James Bell.

'Without the resolution in your hearts to do good work, so long as your right hands have motion in them, and to do it whether the issue be that you die or live, no life worthy the name will ever be possible to you, while, in once forming the resolution that your work is to be well done, life is really won, here and forever.'—Ruskin.

I never knew a critic who made it his business to lash the faults of other writers that was not guilty of greater ones himself, as the hangman is generally a worse malefactor than the criminal that suffers at his hand.—Addison.

A man's time, when well husbanded, is like a cultivated field, of which a few acres produce more of what is useful to life than extensive provinces, even of the richest soil, when overrun with weeds. —Hume.

Every effort is made in forming matrimonial alliances to reconcile matters relating to fortune, but very little is paid to the congeniality of dispositions, or to the accordance of hearts.—Masillon.

In real life I consider charity superior to liberality or even generosity. Liberality and generosity both give, but charity shares and often robs itself to benefit its neighbor.—P. J. Stahl.

I am not so lost in lexicography as to forget that words are the daughters of earth, and that things are the sons of heaven.—Dr. Johnson.

Probably the largest dairy in the world is that owned by Queen Victoria at her model farm near Windsor. It has floors of porcelain tiles of white and blue, containing medallions of the Queen, her husband, and each of their children, marble columns supporting the roof, and windows of stained glass bordered with daisies, buttercups, primroses, and May blossoms. Bas-reliefs of the seasons and various agricultural designs complete the ornamentation, and marble tables and basins are ranged around the wall at intervals, while a perpetual stream of water runs through the building.

The following incident is related of the final destruction of Major Wilson's men while the Matabeles assegaied them. The Induna said that as the supreme moment came the Englishmen, who were still able to rise, stood shoulder to shoulder, took off their hats, and joined in a song, the kind of song that he (the Induna) had heard missionaries sing to the natives. The Matabele then rushed up and, while the men were singing what we supposed to have been 'God Save the Queen,' they were overwhelmed by the natives and assegaied. The Induna estimated that the Matabeles lost eight to every one of the thirty-four white men killed, and said that Lobengula's warriors lay round the dead white men like grass.

Sir Chas Tupper is reported as having made the following remarkable statements at a meeting in London recently:—

Sir Charles stated emphatically that it required only the most casual examination to show that Free Trade as it existed in Great Britain was impossible in the colonies. In Canada it would absorb the whole revenue to collect from direct taxation. In a comparatively new and young country they must fall back upon the indirect taxation obtained from customs duties to obtain revenue. There was no arguments so valuable as experience. From 1873 to 1878 Canada endeavoured to carry out to the utmost extent a Free Trade policy. The result was that the good of the country was unable to obtain revenue enough to pay the ordinary expenditure of the country, and poverty showed itself in every section of the land. Had Canada not abandoned Free Trade, there would be no inter-oceanic line of railway today, and no subsidies of £190,000 to steamship services to Yokahama and Australia, services which were of vital importance to the interests of the Empire. The Dominion would have had no means to assist any Pacific cable because, she would be in a state of insolvency to day.

A Case Where the Expression "Snatched From the Grave" May be Most Appropriately Used—A Story Worthy of a Careful Perusal by Parents.

From the Penetanguishene Herald

A few evenings ago a representative of the Herald while in conversation with Mr. James McLean, fireman on the steamer Manitou, which plies between here, Midland and Parry Sound, learned the particulars of a case which adds another to the long list of triumphs of a well-known Canadian remedy, and is of sufficient importance to deserve wide-spread publication for the benefit it may prove to others. The case referred to is the remarkable restoration to health of Mr. McLean's daughter Agnes, 13 years of age, who had been so low that her recovery was deemed almost impossible. Miss McLean's condition was that of very many other girls throughout the land. Her blood had become impoverished, giving rise to palpitation of the heart, dizziness, severe headache, extremely pale complexion and general debility. At this period Miss McLean was residing in Midland, and her condition became so bad that she was finally compelled to take to her bed. A doctor was called in, but she did not improve under his treatment and another was then consulted, but without any better results. She had become so weak that her father had no hopes of her recovery and did not think she would live three months. The lady with whom Miss McLean was residing urged the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and finally a supply was secured. Before the first box was all gone an improvement could be noticed in the girl's condition, and by the time another box had been used the color was beginning to come back to her cheeks, and her appetite was returning. The use of Pink Pills was still continued, each day now adding to her health and strength, until finally she was restored to perfect health, and has gained in weight until she now weighs 140 pounds. Mr. McLean says he is convinced that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills saved his daughter's life, and he believes them to be the best remedy in the world, and does not hesitate to advise their use in all similar cases.

The facts above related are important to parents, as there are many young girls just budding into womanhood whose condition is, to say the least, more critical than their parents imagine. Their complexion is pale and waxy in appearance, troubled with heart palpitation, headaches, shortness of breath on the slightest exercise, faintness and other distressing symptoms which invariably lead to a premature grave unless prompt steps are taken to bring about a natural condition of health. In this emergency no remedy yet discovered can supply the place of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which build anew the blood, strengthen the nerves and restore the glow of health to pale and sallow cheeks. They are a certain cure for all troubles peculiar to the female system, young or old. Pink Pills also cure such diseases as rheumatism, neuralgia, partial paralysis, locomotor ataxia, St. Vitus dance, nervous headache, nervous prostration, the after effects of la grippe, influenza and severe colds, diseases depending on humors in the blood, such as scrofula, chronic erysipelas, etc. In the case of men they effect a radical cure in all cases arising from mental worry, overwork, or excesses of any nature.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold only in boxes bearing the firm's trade mark. They are never sold in bulk, or by the dozen or hundred, and any dealer who offers substitutes in this form is trying to defraud and should be avoided. The public are also cautioned against all other so-called blood builders and nerve tonics, put up in similar form intended to deceive. Ask your dealer for Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People and refuse all imitations and substitutes.

These pills are manufactured by the Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Brockville, Ontario, and Schenectady, N. Y., and may be had of all druggists or direct by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Co. from either address, at 50 cts a box, or six for $2 50. The price at which these pills are sold makes a course of treatment comparatively inexpensive as compared with other remedies or medical treatment.

Local Legislature.

On the 11th, as stated last week, the Registry bill was agreed to, with amendments. On a clause relating to fee for search a motion to reduce the fee for search and registry, was lost.

On section 73, dealing with the salaries of registrars, Dr. Alward moved that the sum be $2,000 instead of $2,750 as provided by the bill for the registrar of St. John county. The motion was lost by a vote of 9 to 19.

On motion of Mr. Killam the salary of the Westmoreland registrar was fixed at $2,000 instead of $2,250 as proposed by the bill. Mr. Pinder moved that the salary of the York registrar be made $1,500 instead of $2,000 as proposed. This was lost, the vote being 9 to 23.

Mr. Phinney moved that the salary of the Carleton registrar be $1,500. Instead of $1,750 as proposed.

Mr. Dibblee opposed the motion. The fees from Carleton county would be much greater than York, but that registrar had not charged full fees as he might have done. The Carleton county registrar paid $600 for assistance. The motion was lost, the vote being 8 to 19.

Mr. O Brien (Charlotte) moved, seconded by Mr. Russell, that the salary of the Charlotte registrar be $1,200 instead of $1,000 as proposed.

Mr. Hill opposed this, because there would really be no increase, as the fees would not come up to the amount now proposed.

The motion was carried, the vote being 18 to 10.

Mr Phinney moved a re consideration of section 6 so as to vest the appointment of registrars in the municipal councils. This was lost.

Mr Pitts brought up the Bathurst school question. He made a long speech reviewing the evidence and condemning the report of Judge Fraser. He claimed that the allegations in the complaint had been proved. The Protestants of this country would never be satisfied, he said, so long as the public money went to maintain sectarian schools. On his motion the House went into committee to consider the matter, and then Mr. Pitts moved, seconded by Mr. Pinder:—

Whereas—By a resolution of this Legislature passed at the last session, a commission was appointed to visit Bathurst to take evidence and inquire into difficulties arising in connection with the carrying out of the school law in Bathurst and Moncton: and

Whereas—In pursuance of such resolution, His Honor Judge Fraser was appointed such commission, and has visited the said locality under the terms of his commission, held an inquiry touching the difficulties and information upon the school law as alleged by the Protestants of that town and vicinity, and the evidence so taken is now upon the table of the House; therefore

Resolved—In the opinion of this committee, from the evidence, facts and circumstances now before it, the petitioners were justified in asking for an investigation into the administration of the public schools in the County of Gloucester, and further

Resolved—That in the opinion of this committee, in the administration of the public schools law of the province, all classes and creeds should stand equal before the law.

Solicitor General White addressed the House at some length in defence of the government's course and in approval of the commissioner's report. He analyzed the evidence and concluded that the charges had not been proved. What, he said, were the facts in this question? That from the passage of the school law down to 1889 the public schools existed in Bathurst town, Catholics maintained their own schools and, notwithstanding that they were largely in the majority and paid most of the taxes, the Catholics allowed the Protestants to have full swing in the running of the public schools. Previous to 1889 the cost of the public schools had been about $1,000. Since then, when the Catholics came under the law, there had been an additional cost of about $350, the number of pupils attending the public schools being nearly doubled. Protestant children have all the privileges they enjoyed previous to 1889, and the same condition of things exist to-day as previous to 1889 regarding teachers in grammar and public schools, and as regards grades coming to Bathurst village. Mr. White said although there were 170 Catholic children attending schools there, against 16 Protestant children, there had always been one and sometimes two Protestant teachers. Every consideration had been shown both in Bathurst village and town for the feelings and opinions of Protestants, and as the son of an orangeman he (White) must say that there was little or no ground
