Advertise It! How?

It is the duty of all individuals to do what he or she can in the way of advertising the reputable qualities of the city or town in which they live, provided they entertain a proper pride and confidence in their place of abode. Woodstock enjoys a good repute abroad and is a town of which its citizens are proud. Of course, where there exists a lack of faith, in the future prospects of the place. on the part of citizens, it can scarcely be expected that outsiders will be encouraged to seek a location therein. There is no Town, probably, judging from our observation, of which its own people speak to well as do shose of Woodstock. While individuals have a duty to perform in this matter, business men are under a grave responsibility and that responsibility they appreciate here as is shown by their intelligent and extensive advertisement of their respective callings, thro' the local press. And such means, employed ostensibly and properly for their personal ad e, are of vast service as advertisements of the Town and its progress abroad. We know, as most people realize, that readers abroad-far from or near to Woodstock-are given to judge of the true character of the Town in a business point of view, from the pages, advertising and general, of the local papers, and in this regard our local papers afford an excellent index.

Then the governing body of the Town Lindsay died at the residence of his son, have a prominent responsibility. All public John A. Lindsay. The funeral took place improvements which make for the sanitary on Monday afternoon, and was very largely welfare and general convenience; all public attended by citizens of Town and people works which are in keeping with the progressive spirit of the age, are so many telling from the country. Gone to join the angels, peace forever more, Little empty cradle! baby's gone. Yes, our dear little baby has gone home to rest, Where never a sin shall stain her sweet breast; No fears to annoy, no pains to endure, In the arms of Jesus forever secure.

At Bairdsville, Victoria Co., on the 31st ult, Gladys Pearl, aged 4 years, youngest child Mr. and Mrs. George Wallace. We loved our babe most fond and dear,

But death is stronger than all ties, And away its lovely spirit flies. Our babe was lovely, bright and fair, Its course on earth hardly begun, But brighter than all diamonds are, It shines in heaven, beyond the sun. Its little spirit has fled away. Its earthly clay beneath the sod; Its maker spoke and sealed the day And waft it homeward to its God
