Whether or not the world would be vastly benefited by a total and final banishment from it of all intoxicating drinks seems to be not now an open question. Three fourths of mankind confess the affirmative with their tongues, and, I believe, all the rest acknow-ledge it in their hearts. Ought any, then, to refuse their aid in doing what the good of the whole demands? Shall he who cannot do much be for that reason excused if he do nothing? "But," says one, "what good can I do by signing the pledge? I never drink, even without signing." This question has already been asked and answered more than a million times. Let it be answered once more. British parliament under the charge of the leader of the house of commons. It differs in some respects from the Canada Temperance act, but he the same general features. The provisions requiring a two-thirds vote to introduce the system, will be some guarantee that prohibition will not be introduced in advance of public sentiment. It will probably be found that districts in England which accept prohibition will enforce the act. For whatever may be said as to the character of the people in England, it may as well be admitted that they have more general respect for the law of the land than we have in Canada,—Sun.

that he was under the influence of Anderson Grey and was not responsible for the deed. He was acquitted and then Grey was put under arrest and tried for the murder. He was found guilty of murder in the first degece, notwithstanding the fact that he was not present when the crime was committed. The evidence for the state only went to show that he caused McDonald to do the deed through the hypnotic influence.
