The Chieftain's Monument.

On June 6th, in Dominion Square, Montreal, the statue of Sir John A. Macdonald, furnished by contributions from liberal conservatives, to stand a lasting monument to their great chieftain, was unveiled. The ceremonies were witnessed by an enormous concourse of people. Lord Aberdeen unveiled the statue, and delivered an address. Speeches were made by Premier Bowell and

The Provincialist.

Is the title of a paper, the publication of which has just been commenced in Boston.

We have before us the first number. It is a sewerage question and the resolutions passed We have before us the first number. It is a well printed and edited eight page paper; published by the Provincialist Publishing Co., M. J. Keating, a former Nova Scotis newspaper man, managing editor.

It is intended "to furnish the 100,000 natives of New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island resident in Massachusetts, and the several thousand scattered throughout New England, with a brief sum inces, in which all are likely to be interested, and to derote special attention to personal goesip and notes."

The Provincialist enters upon a promising field of usefulness in which we hope it will live and have success. Subscription price $1.50 per year. Among the favorable opinions published in its columns we notice that Dr. R. H. Upham, formerly of Woodstock, warmly endorses it; he writes:—A paper that will give Provincial news unaffected by rectarian bias, will be welcomed not only by the progress of the "exiles."
