It is in this spirit, Mr. Speaker, that I move, seconded by Sir Charles Tupper, that the house do concur in the address of the senate to our most gracious majesty the Queen, congratulating her upon the completion of the 60th year of her illustrious and auspicious reign, by filling up the blank with the words "House of Com-mone." (General cheering.) Sir Charles Tupper followed with a fine speech, in which he not only eulogized the Queen and her reign, but also spoke in eloquent terms of premier Laurier; he said in this connection: But I may at the outset take the advantage of expressing the satis-faction I feel that this tribute of the parliament of Canada will be laid at the feet of the throne by one so well colculated in every way to represent this dominion. (Hear, hear). The honorable mover of this address has already stated that the Victorian era will be one that will shed a lustre on the world. He has referred to the fact as a woman, as a wife, as a mother, her gracious majesty has presented an object of admiration and a model for the women o every country and of every clime.

After passing the address, God save the Queen was sung by members and spectators in the galleries. In the Senate, Hon Mr Mowatt's bill to amend the criminal code was brought up. A clause prohibiting kinetescope exhibitions of prize fights met with warm opposition from Power, Adams, Miller and others, but carried on a division by 20 to 16.

Senator Power said it would be wise to follow the idea out to its logical conclusion by adding a sub-section providing that no newspaper in Canada shall publish any detailed description of prize fights. The sub-section was adopted as was also another suggested by Senator Power providing that no foreign newspaper containing a detailed account of a prize fight should be allowed o come into Canada. The results of the prolonged Liberal caucus today are very important.
