All Right Now.

St John seems to have settled down contentedly in view of the steamship arrangements that have been made. There will be four or five lines plying between St John and Great Britain this winter. The service will be by the Beaver line to Liverpool, weekly, subsidy $140,000; Allan line to London, 10 trips, subsidy $15,000; Donaldson line to Glasgow, 10 trips, $15,000; Hull line to Dublin and Belfast, 10 trips, $15,000.

Any of our readers who may wish to cross the Atlantic this winter will have convenient opportunities for doing so in St John.

Thanksgiving Day.

It is well for governments as for individuals to acknowledge the existence of the Supreme Being and their dependence upon God for national and individual blessings.

It was a happy coincidence whether it occurred through accident or design that solemn proclamations were issued by the governments of the United States and Canada, calling upon their people respectively to observe the same day, November, 25th as one of Thanksgiving to God for his many mercies bestowed.

The result was that on Thursday the people of the entire Continent had in their Churches and domestic circles their minds turned to a reflection upon the blessings enjoyed, the evil averted, the hopeful outlook for the future presented and their feelings attuned to a proper recognition, and devout Thanksgiving to the Divine Director of the Universe.

In Canada we have indeed much—very much—to be grateful for. God has favored our land with peace, plenty and healthful ness. And on Thursday the people of Woodstock, the people of the whole Dominion, felt, doubtless, fully impressed by a sense of their providential surroundings and gave hearty expressions to their sentiments of profound thankfulness.

Premier Emmerson Visits Woodstock.

Premier Emmerson, minister of public works, arrived in town on the 18th. He was called upon at the Carlisle by many citizens and, accompanied by J T A Dibblee and C L Smith, M P P's, made a visit of inspection to the new bridge at Bull's Creek. They also called at the Pure Food Co.'s establishment, with which Mr Emmerson expressed himself as greatly pleased and as entertaining the opinion that it was an industry that promised to be of much advantage to the people of this county and one that must remunerate the promoters for their investment.

Then the minister and the local M P P.'s went over the river to the steam mill in Grafton, where trouble had arisen between the commissioner of roads and school trustees of Grafton of the one part, and the owner, J N W Winslow, and occupier of the steam mill of the other, it being claimed that the mill people have so encroached on the public highway as to make it difficult for teams to pass. Hon Mr Emmerson was asked to use his good sense as a mediator between the parties. It is said that the minister did not consider the road, at the point in question, a part of the great road tho' it was a public road. In a conference with the parties interested, he advised a settlement on conciliatory lines, such a one as would secure to the public a good road there which was important and required by the public. This advice will, it is probable, be acted upon.

Mr Emmerson returned to Fredericton by the afternoon train, intending to return here shortly.

Some home is very sad to-day,
Some hearts are sad and lone,
For death has snatched so suddenly,
Away their dearest one.

Dear as thou was, and justly dear,
We will not weep for thee,
One thought shall check the starting tear
It is, that thou art free.

The summons came so suddenly
And snapped those dearest ties,
And sealed in death her peaceful lips
And closed her loving eyes

She said she longed to meet her friends
Above the bright-blue sky,
And by the quiver on her lips
She meant the words good bye,

Her passing spirit gently fled
To a Heavenly home so fair,
And those who saw the parting hour
Will hope to meet her there.

But this we know, she is not lost,
But only gone before;
And now a crown of life shall wear
Where suffering is no more.

M P Shaw, formerly of Woodstock, N B, had quite an exciting experience one day last week. He saw where a deer had crossed the road near his house, so he started with his axe and lo up jumps a buck deer and run as if shot from the mouth of a cannon Mr Shaw followed on the track 3 or 4 miles when he came up with Mr Deer, who turned to give his enemy battle, as much as to say, old man, I am not going to run, I will show you a Yankee trick. So he put down his head and came for Mr Shaw, but he knew how to use his axe, as he formerly butchered, so when they met down came the axe on Mr buck's head between the horns, and down went the deer and Mr Shaw on top of him, who soon found the jugular vein and cut his throat. He then went home and got his team and got the deer home, before noon, quite elated over his success. How is that Messrs Els. for a man 64 years old. TRIP TO CANADA.

Letter 1.

DEAR SENTINEL:—On July 10, 1897, wife and I left our home at Forsyth, Ga., to visit my boyhood home in far off Canada. We stopped in Atlanta over Sunday, attending three services at First M E Church. While there we put up at Dr A T Cheetham's hospitable home, where our daughter, Mrs R R Reid, and family board. Our stay there was very pleasant. We left on a vestibule train on the 12th, at 12 30 p m, over the Southern System for New York. Nothing special occurred on this run, which was made pleasant by the beautiful scenery along the way. We managed to keep the points of the compass in our heads all during the run there, notwithstanding our car was turned around at Washington, and also at Philadelphia. We arrived at Jersey City about three o'clock, in the rain, having been in our car about twenty-seven hours. We were told our train was about one hour behind time. Crossing the ferry, we soon reached our destination, 159, East 53 Street, New York, without a hitch or mishap, and found our sister, A K Mallory, very glad to see us. Next day, the fourteenth, we took a stroll over Brooklyn bridge. On its summit we had a beautiful view of the city and harbor, with its hundreds of crafts of all sizes and kinds passing this way that way and every other way imaginable. Yet, all seemed intent in pursuit of their own business, and none seemed to interfere with the other. We were told this wonderful structure is one and a quarter miles across; one hundred and fifty-eight feet in the clear above the water. We walked over it and rode back on the cable cars, then taking a limited stroll in this wonderful city, sightseeing.

The next day, 15th, we went to City Island to visit a niece, Mrs. Schofield We had a very pleasant visit there; ate our first clam chowder, and after quite a sacrifice of taste ate our first raw clam, the shell of which we brought home. It is due the kind providers to say we enjoyed both of these new dishes very much. After two days stay we returned to the city, this being on Saturday, 17th We took dinner and left for Attleboro, Mass., over the Shore Line road, making but few stops, first at Bridgeport, after a continuous run of an hour and eighteen minutes. The next stop was New Haven; then New London, where we saw much shipping in port. At the next stop, Providence, we changed cars for Attleboro, taking a local train, as the train we started on did not stop at Attleboro. We reached this place at 9 p m, making the run of 201 miles in six hours. Here we remained four days with our brother, W N Mallory, and his family, and numerous kind strangers who made us feel very much at home and loth to leave them F B Stanton showed us this very pretty city of jewelry notoriety behind his fine steed. Attleboro certainly is a beautiful city.

Wednesday, 21st, we left Attleboro for Woodstock, N B, 6 30 a m, a distance of 454 miles, arriving at Woodstock 10 30 o'clock p m, the same day, quite tired out and dusty Here we will state we lost our bearings just before we got into Woodstock, and seemed to ride in backwards. Nor did a night's rest readjust it; for when we got up the next morning, the river seemed on the wrong side of town, and was running the wrong way. But, on finding our old friend and kinsman, W R Snow, who kindly showed us around, and brought us on the Meduxnikeag bridge from the south end, all at once the points of the compass swung around and took their several positions, while we felt much relief to find that the noble old St John was running the same old course it did in our boyhood days, and young-manhood experience in this old town we loved so much. Since we left the town, in 1859, she has sprung up out of her ashes more than once, and now shows a beauty and thrift becoming her noble citizenship We spent a part of the day looking over the old familiar streets, and anxiously looking for old familiar faces with whom we used to take much pleasure, But alas! how few we found We really were a stranger in our old home. We met S J Parsons with his smiling face and hair whitening with the frosts of time; but it was our same old friend. He took much pleasure in showing us through the Woollen Factory, where he is employed; then the wrapper factory where about fifty of Woodstock's fair and industrious ladies busied themselves manufacturing these-common-sense garments for their own sex. Many of these garments were quite pretty. We were much interested in the different machines employed in this industry, and with the skill those nimble and willing fingers applied them to their several works, and parts of the garmeses. We were shown into the canning factory by our friend W R Snow; also through his splendid laundry. All of these are new enterprises, sprung up since our day in Woodstock. We called on our old friend, the SENTINEL, and found its senior editor, S Watts, in his usual good humor, and faithful at his post of duty with scissors in hand. He gave us a warm greeting, and we left him feeling a little better perhaps than when we found him. Good luck and a long life to you, brother Sam! Charles Trafton was another old and true friend we met, with his broad, smiling face, attending to his official duties about the Post Office. Our next move carried us to Jacksontown behind a spanking bay of Mr. Gallagher's. Found our brother, John Mallory busy with his grist mill, run by Carleton County wind, and making fine material for the grand old buckwheat cakes, material raised in old Carleton County, the banner county of New Brunswick. By the way, this is our old and much loved county. Here, from this elevated part of the county, we can feast our eyes on the beautiful landscape lying out before the observer, where the eye can sweep about forty miles of this enchanting scene. How proud we felt of our old county as we gazed upon the picture; and how we did wish for some of our Georgia friends to help us enjoy it! But how vain the wish when seventeen hundred miles separated us. We spent about a week here among relatives and friends, and after returning to Woodstock, we boarded the cars there, the twenty-seventh of July, for Perth Centre. We had an inspiring ride along the east shore of that river, the St John, whose beauty we could but admire above any other we have ever seen in all our travels. Its smooth, placid waters looked in the sunlight like a molten river of glass winding its way to the sea. We reached Perth Centre about 3 p m. We spent here about four days very pleasantly with brother Josiah Mallory and family and was at a good old-time social meeting where God deigned to meet with us and bless his people. At this place the river is spanned by a fine R Rd bridge and a wagon bridge close side by side, under which flow the deep, dark waters of this noble river, on whose bosom many million feet of native lumber have been borne to market, and will continue to be borne thus for ages to come. Here we left friends, laden with mementoes and presents highly prized by us, and boarded train for Fort Fairfield, Me, to visit sister Margaret Orser, who lives at Maple Grove. We reached the pretty little town about 2 p m, and were driven to our destination, five miles, by Spurgeon Everett, behind his elegant roadster. Many thanks, Spurgeon! We found a warm welcome in the christian home of our niece, Mrs Will Cogswell, where the father and mother awaited us. We spent two or three days here most delightfully, a sort of family reunion. Heard Will sing one of his inspiring songs. God bless Will and all his interests, both spiritual and temporal. While here we visited and took tea with my old friend and schoolmate, Fred Plummer, and his noble wife, a friend we had not met since he was a little boy. He gave us a royal reception and a fine tea. He has a very fine home, and an excellent farm with several large barns well filled. His horses are large and fine. By the way, Fred is a whole-souled, live fellow. On our return to Cogswell's, the clouds poured forth rain in great profusion, and the high wind carried it direct to our mother garments. But we made the trip of two miles safely behind Will's prancing pair, and felt no harm afterward. The next day we stopped on our way to the depot, and dined with Spurgeon Everett, and his noble wife, and were driven from there behind another one of his spanking bays to the depot at Ft Fairfield where we soon boarded the train for Woodstock. Let us say here that Aroostook Co beats the United States for potatoes. Here we see fields of those fine potatoes which are planted, cultivated and dug by machinery, in fields of from twenty to one hundred acres, all looking fine, the pride and the hope of the farmers. On this, as on other similar visits we found smiling faces and glad hearts to greet us. But the parting was sad, when we call to mind the fact that we may never go that way again in life. Yet, this should not sadden our hearts when we reflect that it is our privilege in life to prepare for a meeting beyond all sadness and sorrow. To this end let us all pray.

We reached Woodstock 4 p m, the fourth of August; met brother with conveyance to his home, where we soon went, the roads being perfect, and the horses the best. We found the weather cold and bracing, thermometer at 65 degrees. We were now back at our pleasant home again, and the next day Brother John drove us over to Avondale in search of old friends. The first ones we met were two old schoolmates, Will Drake and his kind wife, who urged us to stay and break bread with them; but the time would not permit of that pleasure. These we had not seen for about forty-five years. We are glad to say that when we left them we were impressed with the fact that they were getting ready for the great meeting above. We then drove to Mrs Mark Palmer's, a distant relative, and a playmate at school fifty years ago. She is now a widow, a lady far down the shady side of life. How glad we were to meet each other again, and talk over childhood, and the many little incidents of school days. She gave us a fine dinner, among other good things was the fine, old-fashioned Christy potato. Her children were all grown and all of them married.

From here we drove toward what we used to know as the Creek Settlement; now Waterville. On the way, we called to see Mrs Mary Walton, and her married daughter, friends we knew forty years ago. The old lady's tears told how glad she was to see us once more She said her age was eighty-two. Her sun is nearly down, but she will come down to her grave like a shock of corn fully ripe, and ready for the harvest. We then headed for home again, passing by the spot where we were baptized, fifty-three years ago last April, by Rev William Pennington, through the ice in the Little Presque Isle How many thoughts ran through our mind as we viewed that well remembered spot, and that beautiful stream as it flowed still toward the Atlantic. The rest of our drive home was a feast to our eyes as we viewed old familiar dwellings and landscapes, and occasionally the familiar but changed face of an old friend. Thus ended one of the most enjoyable days of our whole trip, less the little sadnesses that come along in near touch with all our joys from meeting and parting with such friends. God bless them all, and grant we may all meet in the great beyond, by and by.
