Stories of Kitchener.

Cool, daring, resourceful, and possessed of a wonderful power of self-restraint, Lord Kitchener, says the London Daily Mail, is not the soldiers' idol, that Lord Roberts, his great chief, is, because Kitchener never spares his men; nor, for that matter, does he spare himself. Once a project is afoot, once a goal is to be reached, Kitchener means to get there.

It is hardly to be wondered at that a man of this hard, cool, calculating disposition is not loved; and "Tommy" will never make a pet of Lord Kitchener. But he admires him and places implicit faith in his judgment, and would follow him wherever he chose to go. And what more would a commander have? An authority who was with Kitchener in the Soudan wrote to him: "It appears to be the Sirdar's policy to advance deliberately step by step; to make his position secure after each step before venturing on another; to run no unnecessary risks, but at the right moment to strike hard with unexpected suddenness, and to follow up the blow with energy."

"Every soldier has to fix a chance," and many hope in vain. Kitchener's chance came in 1882, when the rising tide of Mahdism threatened to sweep from end to end of the Soudan. But it was expected that the false prophet's successes were being exaggerated, and Young Kitchener was deputed to make investigations and report. He dressed himself as an Arab trader and entered Omdurman, taking his life in his hand. He went among the wild Kabobish and treacherous pashas, who, had they once penetrated his disguise, would have shown him little mercy.

One day he witnessed the execution of a supposed spy in the town. The poor wretch was subjected to such torture that Kitchener procured a tiny phial of cyanide of potassium, which he concealed about his person. As he subsequently remarked to a brother officer:—

"Death as their heads I did not fear; in fact I expected it. But such a death!"

For two years Kitchener lived under such conditions, never knowing when he might be brought face to face with a violent death, but all the while communicated to the heads of the Egyptian intelligence department information of the utmost importance regarding the Mahdi and his movements. So strictly was his indentity preserved that the British troops did not know him, and a "Tommy" on one occasion flung a brickbat at the brave young officer, whom he took for a "blooming negro." The blow inflicted a rather nasty scalp wound, and had the additional result of creating a proverb:—

"Throw a stone at a negro and you'll hit the Sirdar."

Adventures by the score happened to Kitchener in the exciting role of detective of spies. On one occasion two suspected Arabs were brought into the British camp and confined in the guard tent. Shortly afterwards they were joined by a third. The trio held an animated conversation for some minutes, and then, much to the astonishment of the sentry, the latest arrival stepped forward and said in indisputable English:—

"All right, sentry; I'm going to the general."

The third prisoner was Kitchener, who by this daring ruse, coupled with a perfect knowledge of native languages, confirmed the suspicion that the fellows were dangerous spies. They were promptly shot.

Perhaps the most striking trait in Lord Kitchener's character is his disinclination to put a married man in a position of responsibility under him. He appears to hold the opinion that matrimony interferes with business. He backs up his precept by example, for, as everybody knows, Lord Kitchener is a bachelor. Like many a notable personage before him, he does not shine in the company of ladies. It is related that on one occasion he was presented to a certain well-known Countess at Cairo, and opened the conversation by asking:—

"Do you find Cairo nice at this season of the year?"

"Delightful," she replied.

There was a pause of five minutes, during which Kitchener tugged thoughtfully at his moustache. Then he said:—

"Ah, I am glad!"

Lord Kitchener does not claim to be "a ladies' man.

The Greatest Armament that ever crossed the Sea Since the Time of Xerxes.

An exchange says: We have now in South Africa the largest British Army that has ever assembled on any battlefield in which our troops were engaged in active service.

We have sent over the ocean the greatest armament that ever crossed the sea to do battle since the time of Xerxes, and yet we have not commenced to tax, perceptibly, the resources of our nation to send soldiers to fight for us.

To the Crimea we sent 26,000 infantry, 60 guns and about 1000 cavalry. During the Waterloo campaign we had a little over 30,000 British troops, and even that included the German Legion which was then reckoned among them. At Waterloo itself we had only 15,000 British infantry. During the Tel-el-Kebir campaign we sent to Egypt a little over 30,000 men. Taking now into account that the voyage to the Cape from England is fully 6,000 miles, and that from the Cape around to Durban is 1,200 miles more, it is safe to say that the enterprise of transporting an army such as this over such a distance is the greatest of its kind that has ever been undertaken in the history of man. No other nation has ever transported, or could have transported in so short a time, so great an army.

Prince of Wales may Visit Canada.

MONTREAL, April 7—The Star's special London correspondent cables as follows: Although no definite announcement has yet been made, it is generally believed that the Prince of Wales will certainly visit Canada during the coming summer. The idea to do so was suggested some time ago and has been further quickened by the success of the Queen's visit to Ireland. The crazy attempt on his life at Brussels will also, it is probable, still further influence him to a Canadian trip, as showing that he does not entertain any fears from travelling abroad. The desire of Canada to entertain the Prince has received a further expression within the last few days. His Royal Highness is said to have received an assurance from Sir Wilfrid Laurier that the whole Dominion will welcome him. The Mayors of Ottawa, Toronto, Quebec and Montreal are also said here, though I know not on what authority, to have expressed anxiety to open the gates of their several cities to the heir apparent.

Mother's Remedy

For Croup, Bronchitis, Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat and Asthma is Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine.

A right remedy, right at hand, is the right way to prevent serious illness.

That Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine is the right remedy for all diseases of the throat and lungs is attested by the prudent mothers of Canada who have cured their dear ones time and again by using this famous family medicine.

Pneumonia and Consumption are always the result of a neglected or uncontrollable cold, and can always be prevented and cured by the timely use of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine.

Croup and bronchitis cannot rob the home of its little ones when mother has this her favorite remedy at hand.

Delightfully healing and soothing in action, pleasant to the taste and prompt in affording relief, Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine is the standard remedy for coughs, colds, hoarseness, throat irritation and soreness, tightness in the chest, cold on the lungs, and all kinds of colds in the throat, bronchial tubes or lungs.

Fame is not Everything.

Many men have reached the summit of fame, and afterwards "looked down into the humble valley" from which they came, and longed to be back there again. Fame is not everything in life. The man who thinks the whole world is looking at him generally comes to realise after a while that the world has something better than that to do. The only fame worth striving after is the fame that is acquired by acts of duty. History gives us countless examples of men and women who have become illustrious—not a few of whom commenced life under circumstances apparently most disadvantageous—and yet who rose by dint of will power to most exalted positions in the land. It is a somewhat singular fact that the cleverest and best men have been reared in humble village homes. Remember, that if the opportunities for great deeds should never come, be it ours to know that goodness, not glory, may be our portion.

Good Manners.

Good manners cannot be learned in a moment. There are certain forms to which society has agreed that people must conform if they wish to appear well bred, and these are not at all what the natural inclination would prompt one to do in the circumstances. Children must be taught these conventions, and we must not be surprised if they are sometimes slow in learning them, nor despair if after much teaching they at times relapse into native barbarism. Patient perseverance in training children will at last produce the desired result. The constant repetition that seems so irksome, combined with the silent force of daily example, will effect the end in view—a well-bred child

'My dear,' began the minister's wife, 'here's a bonnet down at the millin—'

'There you go again,' he interrupted: 'always thinking of worldly things.'

'But, my dear, you wrong me,' she said. 'This bonnet is perfectly heavenly.'

'I would like,' said the spare young man to the department store clerk, 'to exchange this cut glass set given us as a wedding present.'

'Yes, sir. What for?' asked the clerk.

'Where is your meat and vegetable department?' inquired the young man.

There is less pauperism in Ireland than there is in England and Wales. Last year one person in thirty seven was a pauper in England and Wales, whilst only one in forty five was receiving poor relief in the sister isle.

Delicate Children

They do not complain of anything in particular. They eat enough, but keep thin and pale. They appear fairly well, but have no strength. You cannot say they are really sick, and so you call them delicate.

What can be done for them?

Our answer is the same that the best physicians have been giving for a quarter of a century. Give them of Cod-Liver Oil with Hypophosphites. It has most remarkable nourishing power. It gives color to the blood. It brings strength to the muscles. It adds power to the nerves. It means robust health and vigor. Even delicate infants rapidly gain in flesh if given a small amount three or four times each day.

Scott's Emulsion

Feeding an Army.

Collier's Weekly makes an interesting computation of the amount of food required for the subsistence of a single British army corps. Each soldier is entitled to three-quarters of a pound of fresh meat and one pound of bread daily; and when on active service, the meat is increased to one pound, and a free ration of groceries and vegetables is also issued.

The average bullock, when slaughtered and cut up by the army butchers, will yield 700 pounds of meat, and 1,343 bullocks must die to provide the troops with one day's rations. Supposing that the operations in the field occupy six months, and the soldiers get fresh meat twice a week, then, in round numbers, 70,000 bullocks must be butchered.

This fresh meat must be eked out with no less than 10,400,000 pounds of salted or preserved victuals, and we get a grand total of 14,500,000 pounds, or 6,500 tons of bullock.

The army eats up 80,000 pounds of bread daily, and bread contains a quarter of its weight in flour. In twenty-six weeks it will require 3,640,000 pounds of flour, or 65,000 bushels.

Supposing the beef averages five pence a pound all around—rather under than over the mark—we have an outlay of £325,000. Add to that £13,000 for the British army's daily bread (at one shilling per stone of fourteen pounds), and a further £212,000 for vegetables and groceries, calculated at the rate of three and one-half a day per man, and a single army corps will eat up £250,000, or $2,750,000 in six months.

What Marriage Means.

Marriage means the gaining of freedom, the direction of a household, the spending of an income, the maintenance of a position, the life of enjoyment, the change from a position of comparative insignificance to one of authority; aye, and more than that, says John Strange Winter in the American Queen.

It is the fruition of life, and not until the plant has reached maturity should there be blossom and fruit. The time in the home, the growth and development at the school and at college and in society, these are the preparation.

Then comes the blossom when the receptant period has become productive, when from being a learner one becomes an actor, when one takes up life for herself and realizes the responsibilities of existence. This is the period before which one should not marry, but after which, if she so wishes, she may do so safely and happily. For what is marriage?

A linking of two lives for good or evil, a conscious and continuous exercise of influence upward or downward, and if the heritage of children is theirs the instilling of principles and the formation of character which will bear fruit in the ages to come.

A True Patriot.

Is he not in reality the truest patriot who fills up his station in private life well; he who loves and promotes peace, both public and private, who knowing that his country's prosperity depends much more on its virtues than its arms, resolves that his individual endeavours shall not be wanting to promote this desirable end? And is he not the greatest hero who is able to despise public honours for the sake of private usefulness, he who has learned to subdue his own inclinations, to deny himself those gratifications which are inconsistent with virtue and piety, who has conquered his passions and brought them low—is not such a man greater than he that taketh a city, or who has secured the thundering applause of assembled multitudes? But if persons in general held these sentiments, if utility were substituted for show, and religious usefulness for worldly activity, how very little our public men would have to do with it!

Two old Scotch friends met and spoke of the days when they had been sweethearts. At last he said:—

'Ah, Jennie, an I hae na loved anybody since you. I hae never forgotten you.'

'John,' she replied, with a little moistening of the eyes, 'you're just as big a leear as ever, an I believe ye jist the same.'

DEAR SIRS:—I can only speak of the "old Johnson's Anodyne Liniment" in the highest terms. I have used it in the gymnasium when the boys have strained or overworked their bodies. It has worked like magic in reducing swelled joints and in removing soreness of the parts. At home my wife has used it with our boys and speaks enthusiastically. In fact for most of the slight ills of the flesh, internal and external, it has proved valuable. [Signed] ROBERT J. ROBERTS.

Miscellaneous.

'She seems to delight in riding on crowded cars.'

'Yes: I've noticed it.'

'I wonder why.'

'Well it seems to me her fondness for it developed about the time that I told her I was once thrown into the lap of a handsome young man when the car suddenly went round a corner.'

'Will you have this here woman to be your lawful wedded wife?'

'That's what I 'lowed I would!'

'Will you love, honor and obey her?'

'Ain't you got that switched roun', parson,' said the groom.

'John,' said the bride-elect, 'don't you reckon the parson knows his business? Answer the question!'

'Yes,' said the groom,' I reckon I'll have to!'

Teacher—What is the meaning of the word 'procrastinate?'

Sammy—It means to put off, sir.

Teacher—That's all right; now compose me a sentence with the word properly introduced.

Sammy—When a man retires at night he procrastinates his clothes.

She—Sir, what do you mean by putting your arm around my waist?

He—Do you object?

She—Mr Arthur Gordon, I'll give you just five hours to remove your arm.

In a cemetery near Portland there are five tablets all alike, except the inscriptions, which read:—

'Anne, first wife of John Brown.'

'Mary, second wife of John Brown.'

'Jane, third wife of John Brown.'

'Clara, fourth wife of John Brown.'

'John Brown. At rest at last.'

Mrs Wonder—I see where a man out West is going to run a paper on strictly religious principles.

Mr Wonder—He can't do it.

Mrs Wonder—I don't see why.

Mr Wonder—Did you ever hear of a newspaper office that could get along without the devil?

Contributor—How much ought I to get for this poem?

Editor—You ought to get about 15 years.

He—Do you believe in hoodoos?

She—I did once.

He—You did?

She—Yes. I married one.

'Be mine,' pleaded the lover fervently. 'It has ever been my ambition to win your fair hand for my prize in life.'

'I'm sorry, Mr Steighlate,' remarked the sweet girl graduate. 'The prize has been won by another, but I'll award you honorable mention.'

For Over Fifty Years

Mrs Winslow's SOOTHING SYRUP has been used by millions of mothers for their children while teething. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures Diarrhœa, regulates the Stomach and Bowels, cures Wind Colic, softens the Gums, reduces Inflammation and gives tone and energy to the whole system. 'Mrs Winslow's Soothing Syrup' for Children Teething is pleasant to the taste and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States. Price twenty five cents a bottle. Sold by all druggists throughout the world. Be sure and ask for 'Mrs Winslow's SOOTHING SYRUP.'

He—I have rather taken a fancy to the English mode of spelling as compared to ours.

She—Yes?

He—Yes, indeed. Take 'parlour,' for instance. Having 'u' in it makes all the difference in the world,

C C RICHARDS & CO.

Dear Sirs—For some years I have had only partial use of my arm, caused by a sudden strain. I have used every remedy without effect, until I got a sample bottle of MINARD'S LINIMENT. The benefit I received from it caused me to continue its use, and now I am happy to say my arm is completely restored.

Georgie—Auntie, I want to run my railroad train across here.

Auntie—I can't move now, Georgie.

Georgie—All right, auntie I'll just play there's a great big fat cow on the track.

REDUCTION IN PRICE —OF— Dr Agnew's Catarrhal Powder.

The price of Dr Agnew's Catarrhal Powder has been reduced by the manufacturer from sixty cents to fifty cents per bottle. This remedy, which has been recommended as no other one in existence, by members of parliament, ministers and educational men, can now be had of any druggist at 50 cents a bottle. It relieves, in ten minutes, headache and all pain caused by colds or catarrh. It is delightful to use. It cures completely. Sold by Garden Bros. —3t-14

Wickwire—Look here! This is the fourth time this morning you have been in asking for the price of a meal.

Dismal Dawson—Yep. I'm the absent minded beggar, don't ye know.

MORIN'S WINE CRESO-PHATES

Cholly—Your papa kicked me out when I asked him for your hand.

Miss Gabby—Papa is so intense. He puts his whole soul into everything he undertakes.

Examine the Tongue.

The skilled physician reads your condition by a glance at your tongue. If it is coated and you have a bitter taste in your mouth in the mornings he knows your liver is torpid and sluggish and prescribes the use of Dr Chase's Kidney Liver Pills. They cure biliousness, stomach troubles, and all liver and kidney disorders. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box. At all dealers.

Dorothy—Pa, I do wish we were rich.

Dorothy's Pa—How rich would you like to be?

Dorothy — Oh, awfully rich; rich enough to snub people and still be called agreeable.

SIDES SORE FROM A HACKING COUGH—Take Phyny Pectoral, it will cure you quickly, no matter how bad the cold. Endorsed by thousands of Canadians. Sold throughout the land. Manufactured by the proprietors of Perry Davis Pain Killer.
