PARLOR, - DINING ROOM,

ROOM OR CHURCH. We have no hesitation in saying that with half the wood which you will use in a cylinder or or-dinary parlor stove, you can obtain a greater dinary parlor stove, you an obtain a greater volume of beat with a greater uniformity of temperature in your hoase with COPP'S WARRIOR HEATER than it is possible under the ordinary system of heating. For why? It is a hot air stove with a greater radiating surface than any other such stove in North America. It is so constructed that the air passing through the upper section becomes thoroughly heated and rapidly distributed, forcing the heat to the extremes of the room, and drawing the cold air into and the room, and drawing the cold air into and through the hot air producing chamber. In fact so perfect are its heating qualities that it has a capacity of 15,000 to 20,000 cubic feet. We are not exaggerating its capabilities when we say the consumption of fuel will be full 50 per cent less than ordinary stove heating, and as the power is hot air, not radiation, all parts of the room will be except way med
