Loving words will cost but little,

Journeying up the hill of life;

Stronger, brave: for the strife.

Do you count them only trifles?

N-ver was one said in vain.

But they make the weak and weary

What to earth are sun and rain? Never was a kind word wasted.

When the cares of time are many,

Think on weak ones close beside you-

Hearts will blossom like a flower.

If you love them, tell them so.

And its burdens heavy grow,

What you count of little value,

Has an almost magic power,

So. as up life's hill we journey,

Let us scatter all the way,

In the dark and cloudy day.

Grudge no loving word or action,

As along through life you go;

Ir you love them, tell them so.

There are weary ones around you-

We will all want to do something towards placing funds where they will be wisely used to secure comforts for them in their time of need. We can do this by sending donations through the Canadian Branch of the Red Cross Society. Some of our unions have sent contributions to this fund to Mrs J A Freeze, Provincial Superintendent of S Idiers and Militia. She writes that it is now on the way to Africa for the

This will be done without stripping India, Eagland and Ireland of their battalions, stiffened by militia, and without calling for more than 10,000 out of 260,000 citizen soldiers.

Times. Perhaps the greatest hindrance to work is the thoughtlessness of those acquaintances who drop in from time to time "just for a moment's chat" or "to wait for the next car". If one had nothing to do, this would be extremely pleasant, but when it really means that the hours of work must be indefinitely lengthened until lost time has been made up, the pleasantness of such a proceeding faits to strike the busy one. The housekeeping woman has no notion of the value of time. How can it be otherwise when she generally has too much of it on Women's Work.

A good story is told of one of these strongminded 'women's rights' lecturers, who, at a public meeting, gave vent to the following remarks on the platform regarding her favor

"I should like to know," said she, looking round the audience, with fire in her eyes, what men know of women's work? What rest quietly in her bed, goes noiselessly down It frequently happens that after people have stairs, rakes out the fireplace, makes the endured the torture of piles for years and sub-fire, cooks the breakfast; then after break ren's clothes, scours the kettles and pane, and has everything in perfect order for the
