...n of the Home.

TERMS OF T... By married woman rightly expects to be queen of her husband's home as well as of his heart, and it is generally due to herself to keep these positions. If she be careless about retaining his love, or fail to assert her own supremacy in the household, there is something lacking in herself and her attitude, and she will speedily fall away from her proper position, and, as she morally makes her bed, so must she lie on it. But another snare that too easily enwraps the feet of a good and amiable woman is over-ready acquiescence (says the Lady). She has given herself and her life to her husband, who may very truly love her, but the average man has his opinions on most things from his own point of view, which is a man's and not a woman's. He lays down the law with more or less tenderness, but most unmistakably, and his wife, instead of saying, 'I don't agree with you,' and firmly but gently stating reasons why, acquiesces, and does his bidding. Or, if it is a point on which he knows she feels deeply, he puts his desire differently, 'Won't you do it for my sake?' he asks, or 'It would be so much to my advantage, and yours, too,' and, against her better judgment, she yields and gratifies him, and thereby gradually loses her position in her own dominion. How many a woman can look back and date a family estrangement from the letter she wrote, sorely against her own inclination, 'just to oblige Charlie'? How many have invited the wrong person, or joined the wrong party, because affectionate pressure was put on them, and they were too weak, too kind-hearted to resist? The woman who is a wife, and especially she who is a mother, makes a great mistake if she thinks that life will be all sailing over summer seas with her husband and children if she only loves them enough, and takes care of their health and comfort. She must take up a firm position, and look very much ahead, if she is really to do well by them. One of the best assorted marriages of modern times was termed by those who looked on 'love and wisdom.' The man visibly provided the love and the wife the wisdom; but it would not have been true wisdom unless inspired by true love.

That Marvel Tommy Atkins.

The following letter has been forwarded to The Methodist Times from the Rev Thos H Waiseman, the recently appointed chaplain to Sir Redvers Buller's forces in Natal:—

"I arrived just at the close of the Tugela battle, and witnessed the long line of stretcher-bearers bringing in the wounded. To attempt a description of the scene is beyond me, for to my mind the scene was so harrowing, so tragic, and withal so sad, that it beggars description. And yet, everywhere around, the soldiers of the various regiments were busily engaged cleaning their accoutrements and generally putting things in order, and seemingly as bright and hopeful as though a great victory had been won—many of them singing and laughing as though heedless of the terrible destruction to which they and their fellows had been exposed the previous day. The bravery and heroism of the British soldier is the talk and the admiration of all who witnessed the battle—both of officers and civilians. As one of the young officers put it to me the day following: 'I have never been on active service before, and could not have believed what I saw, although I have looked at pictures of the battlefield, but always regarded them as overdrawn. But yesterday puts into the shade any picture I have seen. Fort Wylie, one of the Boer positions, looked like a cauldron of fire, shell after shell from our cannon exploding right inside it. All around us and over us raised a perfect storm of lead from the trenches occupied by the enemy. Shells were dropping and bursting all about us; and yet on, straight on, marched our men, not one of them turning a hair, or even so much as looking round to see where the shells were falling; but I looked—my head was continually on the move—I could not keep it still. I never thought of the British soldier in the way I do now; but to me, sir, now he is a grand and a brave fellow.'"

Who is Vice President?

This question, which a subscriber asks, has probably puzzled many other persons. There is no vice president of the United States. When Vice President Hobart died, the office became vacant and will remain so until March 4th next year.

But the succession to the presidency is carefully provided for. If President McKinley should die, the secretary of state, whoever he may be, will, if eligible to the presidency, at once qualify as president.

If for any reason the office of secretary of state should be vacant in such an emergency or its incumbent be as yet unconfirmed by the senate, or under impeachment, or not constitutionally eligible to election as president, the succession would pass to the secretary of the treasury, and so on through the cabinet in an appointed order.

Prior to 1886, when the present law regulating the succession was passed, the president pro tempore of the senate and the speaker of the house of representatives were next in order of succession to the presidency. —Youth's Companion.

Ingersoll and Beecher.

Several years ago Henry Ward Beecher and Colonel Ingersoll met in a railway station in New York state, where both had to wait for a train. They talked together on all sorts of subjects, more especially the future of man. Finally the conversation drifted to peculiar epitaphs on gravestones, and Mr Beecher, who had been looking over the headlines of a morning paper, exclaimed:

'Ah, colonel, here is a fitting epitaph for you.' The day before the birthday of Robert Burns, the Scotch poet, had been celebrated with unusual ceremony, and a description of the celebration occupied considerable space on the first page of the paper. Mr Beecher tore off a two column headline and handed it to the unbeliever.

'I read, 'Robert Burns.'

Two years later Ingersoll and Beecher met again in a St Louis hotel. 'I remember your epitaph on me, Mr Beecher, and I have got one for you. I will read it for you. 'Born in the slavery of sectarian shackles, hungry and thirsty for freedom and light, he yet died in religious bondage.'"

Hose Water and Rain.

Flowers know the difference between a rainstorm and a drenching from the garden hose. You may deluge them with barrels from the hydrant, and they will at best simply hold their own. Generally they wither in the long, dry seasons and that without regard to the artificial wetting they may receive from the gardeners. But let a little shower, however brief, fall upon them, and they brighten visibly.

The difference is that the rain brings down with it through the air or collects in the air a chemical quality that the vegetation needs. The rain water may be as like that in the lake as two volumes of water can be, but when it has ridden the upper levels of the atmosphere, when it has traveled through the various stages of vapor and liquid and has tumbled down through that retort of the air, it has become charged with elements that no man can give it, and the flower knows and recognizes it, as the first field flowers recognize it in the beginning.

Free to Inventors.

The experience of C. A. Snow & Co. in obtaining more than 20,000 patents for inventors has enabled them to helpfully answer many questions relating to the protection of intellectual property. This they have done in a pamphlet treating briefly of United States and foreign patents, with cost of same, and how to procure them; trade marks, designs, caveats, infringements, decisions in leading patent cases, etc., etc.

This pamphlet will be sent free to anyone writing to C. A. Snow & Co., Washington, D.C.—3m 4

What is believed to be the largest single life insurance policy ever written at one time on the life of any man was placed last week by August Belmont on the life of John B McDonald, contractor for the New York Rapid Transit tunnel. The policy is for $2,000,000 for the term of five years, and was taken by a life insurance company, the amount to be distributed among the companies in America and some in England.

Telephone Girls.

The physical requirements in girls who are given positions in the telephone exchange are almost as stringent as those insisted upon in men enlisting in the army. To become a 'hello' girl the applicant must not be more than 30 years old nor less than 5 feet 6 inches tall. Her sight must be good, her hearing excellent and her voice soft, her perception quick and her temper angelic. With all these qualifications a girl may secure a position answering the calls of telephone subscribers and will be enabled to earn from $1.10 to $1 50 a day. Every girl's sight and hearing are tested, and her height is measured before she is hired. Tall, slim girls with long arms are preferred for work on the switchboards. Fat, short girls occupy too much room and are not able to reach all of the six feet of space allotted to each operator. With regard to nationality, it is said that girls of Irish parentage make the best operators.—Philadelphia Call.

Steam For Train Robbers.

Every locomotive that is built in the west nowadays has the new antibandit attachment.

On all the new engines of the D and R G railway are iron pipes extending along the roof of the cab and connecting with the boiler. Through these pipes, without making a perceptible motion, either the engineer or fireman can send under 200 pounds pressure a jet of steam and boiling water that would effectually cook anything living that happened to be on the tender or the front end of the baggage car. The diameter of the pipe is 1¼ inches, and a single second would drop any man who tried to stand before it in action.

The steam leaves the pipe at a temperature of about 750 degree, hot enough to have the toughest of outlaws cooked by the time the train could be brought to a standstill. It will quell the ardor of these gentlemen who make a specialty of holding up engineers from the tender.

Tramps are fighting shy of this railroad. —Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

Painless Vaccination.

Vaccination without pain or inflamation is the latest departure in local medical practice. The process is the result of a theory evolved by Dr Liesher of the Pennsylvania Relief and Dr J W Stewart. It is well known to physicians that hundreds of people abhor vaccination because of the pain and inconvenience attending the inflamation which accompanies vaccination under the old methods. Accordingly the physicians have been experimenting with gelatin disks, which are placed over the point where the virus is injected. The point of injection is thus made perfectly airtight, excluding parasites and other foreign matter calculated to produce inflammation. Consequently the beneficial results are obtained without the soreness. A number of patients have submitted to the treatment, and no annoyance has been experienced in any case. School children have pursued their studies as usual, free from pain or inconvenience.—Logansport (Ind) Cor Indianapolis News.

'Do you know,' he said, 'that every time I look at you I have thoughts of revenge?'

'Why?' she gasped.

'Because,' he answered, 'revenge is sweet.'

Then she told him she thought tomorrow would be as good a time as any to see papa.

It's Easy To Take

Thin, pale, anæmic girls need a fatty food to enrich their blood, give color to their cheeks and restore their health and strength. It is safe to say that they nearly all reject fat with their food.

SCOTT'S EMULSION OF COD LIVER OIL WITH HYPOPHOSPHITES OF LIME & SODA is exactly what they require; it not only gives them the important element (cod-liver oil) in a palatable and easily digested form, but also the hypophosphites which are so valuable in nervous disorders that usually accompany anæmia.

SCOTT'S EMULSION is a fatty food that is more easily digested than any other form of fat. A certain amount of flesh is necessary for health. You can get it in this way.

We have known persons to gain a pound a day while taking it.

Reading Aloud.

Reading aloud to the children and in the family circle—how fast it is becoming one of the lost arts! What multitudes of children of former days were entertained and instructed by this practice and how few there are who are so entertained and instructed nowadays. Children now, after being taught to read, join that great army which takes in the printed word, swiftly and silently. Most parents doubtless are too busy to spare time to educate their sons and daughters by reading to them, and as the children grow older they find their hours too crowded to devote any of them simply to listening. 'What is the use? they would say, if asked. 'Tastes differ, and we can read what we want in a fraction of the time that would be consumed if we had to sit still and hear it.'

This is all true enough, but is there not something lost in having the custom of reading aloud lapse so entirely? As a sign of the times, the change is another proof of the rush and hurry of life, and, in the family, it is more or less to be considered an evidence of the tendency to 'independence' on the part of the younger members. Common interest in a good book, read aloud by a father or mother, is a factor in the home that is important enough to have some attention paid to it. The opposite of 'skimming' a book, it develops certain mental faculties that it is well to have developed and as an exercise in elocution for the reader it has a distinct advantage. Books so read are remembered, and their influence on character far exceeds that of many a volume whose pages are turned in a desperate effort to reach the last. Reading aloud is a salutary check on the habits of reading too much and reading too fast.

It would certainly be worth while to take up the practice in families, where the conditions favor it, as an experiment. The winter evenings are long, and as one looks back on them he can find at least a few hours that could have been devoted to reading or to listening. Reading aloud is a quiet enjoyment, to be sure, but it is an enjoyment.—Hartford Courant.

His Intimate Friends.

Father Darcy, an Irish wit, was once invited by a man who was known as an ignorant braggart to visit a new and beautiful house which the person who had become wealthy suddenly, had bought. With more than his usual pomposity the host dragged the priest over the place and expatiated on the excellence of everything that he owned. Finally they reached the immense library, where there were thousands of volumes, all splendid in binding. The host sank into one of the great leather covered chairs with a sigh of contentment and exclaimed:

'But, after all, father, what is all this luxury compared with my favorites here? The other rooms maybe give pleasure to my wife and daughters, but this is my place—right here among these books, which are my friends. And these here on the desk' —pointing to a score of fine volumes—'are what I may call my most intimate friends.'

Father Darcy got up and examined one of them, when a broad grin spread over his good natured face.

'Well, it's glad I am to see that you never cut your intimate friends!' he exclaimed.

The Age of Iron.

The census taken at the dawn of the twentieth century marks the greatest epoch in our national life. The age of iron has come to a climax with a force almost dynamic. The world has witnessed the golden age of Augustus, the silver age of Elizabeth, the era of great wars and of wonderful progress in the arts and sciences, but as the nineteenth century culminates and beholds the age of iron and steam and electricity, telegraphs, sewing machines, telephones, automobiles an age which is devoted to material development, to the accumulation of wealth and to the upbuilding of vast enterprises and which hails the advent of the uncrowned king of commerce, the consolidation of great corporate interests. High water mark in our commercial and industrial life has been attained and to that fact the vast enumeration to be taken next year will add its testimony. The work of the twelfth census will mark the industrial growth of the nation and be another milepost in its marvellous history.—North American Review.

Miscellaneous.

'Madam,' said the tramp as a middle aged lady came to the door in response to his knock, 'would you give a poor old man a bite to eat?'

'Why,' replied the lady, 'you are certainly able to earn a living. You don't look very old.'

'Looks are often deceitful, lady,' answered the wanderer. 'I am old enough to be your grandfather.'

A moment later he was seated in the kitchen, and nothing she had in the pantry was too good for him.

A noted humorist had often petitioned the council of the town where he resided to fill up a mudhole near his house, but without result.

One night he heard a spluttering noise and sundry ejaculations unfit for publication, and, going to his door he found a respected member of the town council floundering about in the mudhole.

'Good evening, sir. I am glad to see you stirring in this matter at last, and so saying he closed the door and left the poor councillor to extricate himself as best he could.

'A pretty lot of children you are for a minister to have!' exclaimed a West Side pastor whose children were misbehaving at the dinner table.

'Then why don't you change your business, papa?' asked 4-year-old Nellie.

'They want to enlarge the capitol at Washington because it is getting too crowded.'

'Pooh, pooh! Why, they haven't begun to fill up the dome yet.'

'Did you hear what Whimpton's little boy said when they showed him the twins?'

'No. What was it?'

'He said: There! Mamma has been getting bargains again.'

'They say old Hucks has died of consumption,' said Mrs Flynn to a neighbor.

'Oh? Never knew they had consumption in the family.'

'That doesn't matter,' said Mrs Flynn. 'My sister's husband died of gastric fever, and there was no gas in the house—they always used paraffine!'

Lawyer—So, witness, your name is Samson?

Witness—Yes, sir.

'Now, remember, you are on your oath. Do you seriously think you could break your namesake's record?'

'I don't know, sir, but I'd like to try when you have finished with your jawbone.'

Mrs. Bliffers (looking up from the paper)—Of all things! A couple who have lived together for 60 years have applied for a divorce.

Mr. Bliffers—My, my! Sixty years! I don't wonder!

Ernest McGaffey, the poet, is accredited with a good bonmot. A lady said to him:

'Oh, Mr. McGaffey, I have just seen your wife for the first time since your marriage. But I had supposed that she was a taller woman. She seems shorter than when I saw her last.'

'Certainly,' replied the poet solemnly; 'she has married and settled down, you know.'

Of course, I wouldn't lie, even to a conductor, she said, but I just couldn't bear to pay fare for Ethel.

How did you get out of it?

Why, I told him she was five years old yesterday. She was, you know—also the day before, and the day before that, and, in fact, every day for the last two and a half years. I didn't say that she wasn't more than five, but merely that she was five. Oh, I couldn't bring myself to tell an untruth.

"Opportunity is the cream of Time."

Now is your opportunity. There is no time when the system is so much in need of a good medicine, like Hood's Sarsaparilla, and no time when it is so susceptible to the benefits to be derived from such a medicine. By purifying, enriching, and vitalizing the blood and toning up the system Hood's Sarsaparilla starts you right for a whole year of health.

Constipation is cured by Hood's Pills.

'What is a sausage?' inquired the sweet singer.

'A sausage,' grinned the comedian boarder, 'is a ground hog.'

That you can only cure your Grippe, Cold, Bronchitis, etc, by using 'MORIN'S WINE CRESOPHATES.'
