The Origin of Woman.

According to a Hindoo legend, this is the proper origin of woman: Twashtri, the god Vulcan of the Hindoo mythology, created the world. But on his commencing to create woman he discovered that with man he had exhausted his creative materials, and that not a solid element had been left. This, of course, greatly perplexed Twashtri and used him to fall into a profound meditation. When he arose from it he proceeded as follows: He took the roundness of the moon, the undulating curves of the serpent, the graceful twist of the sleeping plant, the light shivering of the grass blade and the slenderness of the willow, the velvety softness of the flowers, the lightness of the feather, the gentle gaze of the doe, the frolicsomeness of the dancing sunbeam, the tears of the cloud, the inconstancy of the wind, the timidness of the hare and the vanity of the peacock, the hardness of the diamond, the sweetness of honey, the cruelty of the tiger, the heat of fire and the chill of snow, the cackling of the parrot and the cooing of the turtle dove. All these he mixed together and formed woman. Then he presented her to man.

But a week after the man came back to Twashtri and said: "Oh, Lord, the creature thou hast given me poisons my existence. She jabbers incessantly and takes up all my time. She continually complains without a cause and is always ill. I have come to implore you to take her back again, for I cannot live with her." And Twashtri took the woman again. But a week after the man once more made his appearance, saying: "Oh, Lord, my life is lonely and desolate since thou tookest her away. Now, I remember that she danced before me and sang sweet songs to me. I also recollect the tender looks she gave me. She fondled me and took me in her arms."

And Twashtri was moved to pity and restored her to man, But only three days after the man once more appeared before Twashtri and commenced: "Oh, Lord, I do not know why, but I am certain that the woman causes me more vexation than pleasure. I beseech thee, take her away from me."

But the enraged Twashtri cried out: "Get thee hence, and proceed the best thou canst, ungrateful being." But the man said: "I cannot live with her." "Neither will thou henceforth be able to live without her." And the man was sorely troubled and lamented: "Woe unto me! I cannot do with her, and I cannot do without her. My misery has commenced."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Circumstantial Evidence Was Strong, But it Was Wholly False.

"As to circumstantial evidence, it's a queer thing," said the man in the brown suit. "Five or six years ago I was in a town in Indiana for a night when a bank was robbed. Next morning I was arrested as an accomplice, it being contended that I was seen idling in front of the bank and evidently acting as sentinel for those within. Three different persons identified me as the man, and the fourth claimed to have seen me enter the hotel at a late hour by way of a shed and a window. I was locked up for examination, with a chance of things going hard with me, when evidence began to come forward on my side. The landlord asserted and swore that I was sitting in the office at 10 o'clock p m. Two servants swore to seeing me go to my room half an hour later. A man having rooms opposite the hotel swore that he saw me smoking at my window at midnight. A guest of the hotel, who had a room next to mine, swore that my snores disturbed him till 2 o'clock, and that he heard me turn over in bed at 3, and so I was honorably discharged from custody."

"But about its being queer?" was asked.

"Why, all the people on both sides were mistaken. I was not outside the bank at the time mentioned, and neither was I in the hotel."

"But you were somewhere?"

"Oh, of course. Fact is, I got mashed on the landlord's daughter, and we sat up all night on a balcony and squeze hands and talked love and looked at the moonlight and slapped mosquitos. Yes, sir, sat there all night like a couple of idiots, and though I declared I would die for her, and she said she only wanted me and an humble cottage, she was married to a red headed butcher within a year, and I was being sued by a snub-nosed widow for breach of promise. I was simply observing, you know, that circumstantial evidence is a queer thing, and I wish to add that a juryman shouldn't be influenced too much by it."—Washington Post

Excuses Explained.

Boys, learn early in life to avoid the bad habit of making excuses. The man who is ever ready to excuse himself for some duty undone is not the man needed to-day, because he is not the man who can be depended upon. The men we need to-day, and the men the world needs to-morrow, are those who do what is demanded of them so well that no excuse will be necessary.

The boy who is ever seeking to excuse himself for being late at school, and forgetting something which should have been done, or for failure to do his best, will, unless he breaks away from this insidious habit early, grow up to be unreliable, careless, and inefficient, and the place which ought to have been held will be gained by the man who, even though he makes occasional mistakes, had no excuse to offer because he is conscious of having tried to do his best. The world very soon learns to have confidence in the man who throws his heart into whatever he has to do. Though such a man may make mistakes they are seldom repeated, and hence no idle excuse is necessary.

Another dangerous tendency of excuse making is that it leads often to insincerity and dishonesty. A boy who is willing to find excuses which will cover his neglect and shield him from present censure, is very likely to grow more and more careless in his work, and seek any excuse that will accomplish its end. In the wake of idle excuse follows a long train of evils, which will ruin any man, such as untruthfulness, dishonest service, and finally dishonest business methods. The world never before had so many great places for the earnest, honest, faithful and truthful man; and one of the best and surest ways to find a high and honorable place for yourselves, boys, is to do all you have to do so well that no excuse will be necessary.

The Prince of Wales' Income.

The truth is that from the moment of his birth the Prince of Wales has been splendidly rich. He was born as the Irishman would say with sixty thousand a year in his pocket, and from that day to this the Duchy of Cornwall has given him that sum At 22 the Prince married, and Parliament gave him Marlborough House and a wedding present of £40,000 a year. That, too, has come to him regularly since 1863, year in and year out. In 1899, when the Prince's family used his money, Parliament once more came to his aid and nearly doubled the grant he had received since 1863. From 1889 the Prince has been relieved of the anxieties of a father for the financial welfare of his children by a special grant of £35,000 a year, which comes to him in quarterly instalments of £9,000. So that the public income of the Prince is 136,000. That is what it is worth to be the Prince of Wales.

A beautiful plait of golden hair full seven feet long, attracted great attention at the Paris Exposition. This wonderful hair belonged to a young girl of Normandy, who sold it to a hair dresser for 300 francs to pay a family debt and save her father's good name. Since then it has been sold for 1000 francs and again for 3,000 francs

Salisbury's Significant Words.

Speaking of Lord Salisbury's recent speech at the Lord Mayor's banquet the Chicago Times-Herald says: "We come to something that is really novel and very significant in the premier's reference to the day when members of parliament from the Orange and Transvaal colonies will be present at the Lord Mayor's banquets. This looks like the complete adoption of Mr Chamberlain's ideas of imperial federation by the powerful leader of Mr Chamberlain's party, who has never committed himself so clearly to the plan before. It is striking evidence of the impulse that the events of the last year have given to a policy which has often been treated as an idle dream. Englishmen have been taught to have a new respect and a new affection for the colonials. They have found that they are as loyal to the British flag, as keen to defend it as the dweller in Kent, Devon or Yorkshire, and they have gained immensely in the sense of a common brotherhood throughout the empire. Under the enthusiasm of the sentiment their stubborn conservatism has begun to give away, and they are getting ready to grant of their own desire the very thing that they have been inclined to refuse when it was proposed to them as the desire of others and an encroachment upon their prerogatives After such a speech as this coming from such a man in such a position we may expect a movement towards federation that will be far beyond the expectations of the agitators of ten years ago."

Child Punishment.

The punishment should be proportioned to the offence and grow out of it as a natural consequence. A child who is lazy in the morning and persistently late for breakfast, should be deprived, not of a proper amount of food, but of something he particularly likes and might have had if he had been in time, as sugar on the oatmeal, or syrup on the griddle cakes If he has been promised that he should go for a drive or a walk, or some expedition, and is not ready at the time for starting he should be left behind. The bitter disappointment will teach him, as nothing else can do as effectually, the value of punctuality. If he is sent on an errand and does not return promptly he should not be allowed to taste the nice things made with the sugar or eggs he was so long in bringing. If his errand were of some other nature he should be made to stay alone in his own room for as long a time as he kept his mother, or any one else waiting

A Gift to Give.

It is often difficult to decide what to get your friends for holiday gifts Here is a suggestion

"Good morning, Jennie, I have brought you a nice present," said Gertrude, as she handed her friend a neatly wrapped package.

The pale, weary looking girl, who was slowly recovering from severe illness, opened the bundle and held up a large bottle of clear, rich medicine

"Hood's Sarsaparilla!" she exclaimed. "I have been reading about it today and wished I had a bottle."

On New Year's Day Jennie was able to be out on the street, and to her friends who remarked how well she was looking she simply said, "Hood's Sarsaparilla," and every one of them knew it was this great medicine that had given back her health

Two Boys Who Sold Papers.

Much like the rise of 'Hughey' Chisholm president of the International paper company, was that of Franklin W Cram, who has just been chosen president and general manager, of the Bangor & Aroostook railroad—only Cram hasn't climbed to the dizzy business heights that Chisholm has by convincing his company that his services are worth $1,000 a week.

Both these men once sold newspapers on Maine railroad trains. Chisholm, however, soon got to be boss of the 'news butchers,' and in that way learned something of the canny art of 'trust marking. Cram moved up more gradually—from 'butcher' to porter; then successively fireman, engineer, conductor, superintendent, and so on. For some time previous to his promotion to the presidency of the road he had been the executive head of the company, and the choice was entirely in accord with the wishes of Albert A Burleigh, who established the B & A Railroad, and himelf held the office of president until quite recently.

President Cram gets to New York once in a while, and the two old newsboys, both now corporation presidents, are good friends and generally manage to get together of an evening. It is surmised that such conferences will be necessarily more frequent in the future when the American pulp and paper manufacturers must have more spruce logs from across the Aroostook border, or else build mills on the Dominion side of the line.—New York Commercial

Nervous Dyspepsia.

In this age of nervous diseases, when people on all sides are falling victims to nervous prostration, paralysis, locomotor ataxia and other dreadful maladies, it is a comfort to know that you can turn to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food (pills) with absolute assurance that it will thoroughly build up and revitalize the feeble, wasted nerve cells.

Mr. Joseph Geroux, 22 Metcalf street, Ottawa, Ont., writes: "I was nervous, had headache and brain fag. I was restless at night and could not sleep. My appetite was poor, and I suffered from nervous dyspepsia. Little business cares worried and irritated me. After having used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food for about two months, I can frankly say that I feel like a new man.

"My appetite is good, I rest and sleep well, and this treatment has strengthened me wonderfully. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is certainly the best treatment I ever used, and I say so because I want to give full credit where it is due."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food makes the blood rich, the nerves strong, and restores vigor to the whole system; 50 cents, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Company, Toronto.

The River of Life.

Running over hill and mountain,
Running over dune and dale,
Running, running, never stopping,
On the mountain or in the vale.

Sometimes losing drops of water,
Which soak into the sands below,
But still on throughout all ages,
The tide of Life will flow.

Flow until it reaches
The Sea of Eternity,
Where happy islands are for the blessed
And where we all shall happy be.

After flowing throughout all ages,
Will that far off sea be reached,
Where music is played by angels
And the roll of Life will cease?

—Mary McManus, aged 11.

Striving After Popularity.

How to become popular—that is the universal cry of girldom. In the days of old, when our grandmothers wore their lace mitts and high buckled shoes and were but toned into corsages by main strength, the art of becoming popular was one universally taught to girls, and it would have been most unseemly, to say the least, in any young lady of family pretensions to display ignorance in the business of charming. But nowadays study of the ologies and golf seems to have misplaced entirely the old art, and girls who have been through school and who have studied more than our gentle ancestors ever dreamed of cry aloud to be told the secret which will bring them friends, make them a centerpiece of attraction, insure their popularity, in short, with the people they meet It is a faculty born with some people, but it may be learned, When followed only for the sake of results to self, it is one of the most exacting arts which could be conjured up for study and attention,

The girl who wishes to be popular must be entirely forgetful of self where convenience or pleasure is concerned, for the unselfish person is always the most popular of all persons. She must always study other people's interests before her own. She must take for granted the utter selfishness and vanity of the average human creature, and she must cater to each and every one she meets in all the thousand delicate ways which come naturally to a woman who wills. The selfish person is never popular unless she so artfully conceals her selfishness that it can be mistaken for something else.

Does the sarcasm in all this strike home, you girls who have written to me begging the secret of popularity? I would that I could point every word with a sting, so that you would never forget it. My dear girls, why set up such an unworthy ideal of life? Why strive, as you tell me you are striving, for the mere petty satisfaction of being called "popular," of being sought by your friends and envied by your enemies? Why not take a noble idea and follow it? Be unselfish, be helpful, be kind and be sympathetic. These are worthy attainments, for they help ease the inevitable burden of humanity for some weary pilgrim on life's road; they make earthly existence a little brighter and a little better, and ultimately they cannot result otherwise than in bringing you that very boon you desire so much, popularity. Take the means, not the end, however, as your goal. Strive to lift your nature to the high plane of self sacrifice and make duty, gentle and undeviating, your watchword and you will rise ten times higher in the scale of worthiness than any striving after popularity can ever lift you.—Grasiella in Pittsburg Press.

The Esquimaux in Alaska Die in Hundreds.

A scourge of sickness and death such as never before was known in Alaska, has attacked the Esquimaux population throughout the western and central parts of the territory this year. Tales incredible to one who has not been a personal witness could be told of the awful havoc wrought by disease during the past summer. The white man, of whom there never were so many in Alaska, has escaped, and even the congested and exposed settlement at Nome where thousands of miners and adventurers were congregated was miraculously saved from an epidemic But the native, who is always the friend of the whites, for whom he has suffered in a variety of ways since civilization approached his shores, has been stricken as never before. In some native villages, one half of the population has died of disease and starvation. Those who escaped death did so only after severe illness and privation. Being sick, the natives have been unable to engage in the summer occupation of fishing, and the outlook for the winter is as gloomy as the long Arctic night,

All the Government officers in Alaska and all the captains of merchant and tramp vessels that have called at this port since spring have told almost incredible stories of the suffering among the Esquimaux. The worst was up the Yukon among the river natives Captain Cantwell, commanding the revenue cutter Nunivak, which wintered in the Dall river, a northern branch of the main stream just below the Arctic circle, and has been patrolling the Yukon all summer, took on board here early in the season twenty tons of relief supplies, and these were distributed among the sick and starving natives on the river. The twenty tons formed only a drop in the bucket. The necessity was far greater than the Government realized.

Child Cured of Catarrh by Catarrhozone.

Perth, Ont.,—"I cannot withhold my testimony as to the great value of Catarrhozone as a remedy for Catarrh, one bottle having cured my daughter of that trouble. I heartily recommend it to all who are suffering with Catarrh. No house should be without it." Mrs J A Morriss.

So pleasant, babies use it, so safe, grandmothers employ it, so certain to cure, doctors, lawyers, merchants, public speakers, rely upon Catarrhozone for Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, Hay Fever. Catarrhozone is so cheap, because it lasts so long and because it is so sure to cure that even the poorest can afford to buy it The only remedy sold with a guarantee—your money back if not benefitted. Sold by all druggists or sent by mail on receipt of $1.00. Trial size 10 cts. N C Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont, Hartford, Conn.

Rabbits Cause Diphtheria.

The town of Grafton, Ill, is undergoing an epidemic of black diphtheria, which physicians believe was communicated to persons by rabbits. Business in the place is stagnant and the two thousand residents remain indoors by the order of the mayor. Churches, public schools and courts have temporarily suspended, and the business of the place will not revive until the disease has abated. It is still gaining. Grafton has been quarantined against and has itself prevented the entrance of outsiders There have been more than one hundred cases of diphtheria and twenty deaths. A great many rabbits have infested the country surrounding Grafton this fall, and the hunters put them on the market so cheap that they were used largely as food. Within the last week hundreds of dead rabbits have been found near the town. Physicians then became convinced that the rabbit flesh was responsible for the illness and caused microscopic examination, which proved that the rabbits found dead had succumbed to diphtheria. The physicians then issued a warning to the townsfolk to abandon from eating rabbits and none has been eaten since How the rabbits originally contracted diphtheria is not known.

Miscellaneous.

First Student—It's my aunt's birthday to-morrow. I don't know what sort of present to give the old lady.

Second Student—I'll tell you what. The poor old thing has had a very joyless youth. Write her an anonymous love letter.

An Englishman, travelling in Ireland, was rating a porter for not putting his luggage in the right train. "You donkey! Didn't I tell you I was going to Bray?" "Och' sure," said Pat, "any ass can do that."

She—"Before we were married you used to say you loved to sit here on the shore with me and listen to the murmurs of the tide." He—"Of course; what does a man know about the murmurs of the tied before he is married?"

Mabel—I must say that for absolute untrustworthiness there's nothing like a man.

Kate—Why, what makes you say that?

Mabel—Well, you remember when I rejected Mr Bullfinch about three weeks ago?

Kate—Yes.

Mabel—Well, he said he should certainly pine away and die, and I should be his murderess. Well, I just met him in the street walking with another girl, and actually I believe the fellow has gained twenty pounds in weight.

Father—Look here, Tommy; what do you think of the new baby brother the doctor has just brought?

Tommy—Why, he's got no hair!

Oh! and he's got no teeth! You've been took in, father; he's brought you an old 'un!

"Look at that woman. She has been lying down all day reading a novel of Marie Corelli's"

"Well, maybe it isn't worth sitting up to read."

For Over Fifty Years

Teacher—Sammy, can you tell me where and how iron was first discovered?

Sammy—I can't tell you just where, but I think I know how it was discovered.

Teacher—Well, Sammy, what is your information on that point?

Sammy—I heard pa say, the other day, that they smelt it.

A Tonic for Mothers.

The happiness that comes to a home with baby's advent is too frequently shadowed by the ill-health or weakness of the mother. To restore the mother's strength, to bring back vigor and energy, and to sustain her during the nursing period, Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is undoubtedly the most effective preparation obtainable. It makes the blood rich, revitalizes the nerves, and has a wonderful restorative influence on the whole system. 50 cents a box, all dealers.

Mother (putting the boy out of the pantry)—How many more times will I have to tell you to keep away from that preserve jar?

Small Boy (sobbing)—No more, mamma; they're all gone,

This is What They Say.

Those who take Hoods Sarsaparilla for scrofula, eczema, eruptions, catarrh, rheumatism or dyspepsia, say it cures promptly and permanently, even after all other preparations fail. You may take this medicine with the utmost confidence that it will do you good.

What it has done for others you have every reason to believe it will do for you.

Constipation is cured by Hood's Pills. 25c.

Freddy (to schoolfellow)—My! how that new baby at your house cries, Tommy!

Tommy (indignantly)—He doesn't; and, anyhow, if you had no teeth and no hair, and your legs were so weak you couldn't stand on them, I guess you'd cry; so, there!

Minard's Liniment Cures garget in cows

A man suffering excruciatingly from toothache meets a friend and tells him his woes.

Friend—Ah, I had just as bad a toothache as you yesterday, and I went home and my wife pitied me and made so much of me that the toothache disappeared! You take my tip!

Sufferer—Is your wife at home now, do you think?

Purges the bowels, enriches the blood and gives a refreshing sleep

The Widow—Yes, Mr Gibbs proposed last night, but when I thought of poor dear Charles I refused—absolutely refused—to marry again—

Friend—Indeed?

The Widow—To marry again before the year was out.

Sciatica put him on Crutches.—Jas. Smith, dairyman, of Grimsby, Ont., writes: "My limbs were almost useless from sciatica and rheumatism, and, notwithstanding my esteem for physicians, I must give the credit where it belongs. I am a cured man to-day, and South American Rheumatic Cure must have all the credit. It's a marvel.—34

CONSUMPTION!

Startling Statement by Sir James Grant, of Ottawa.

3000 Die Annually

In Ontario Alone Through the Ravages of the Great White Plague.

Before the Canadian Medical Association held at Ottawa a few days since, Sir James Grant, the noted physician, made the startling statement that 3,000 persons die annually in Ontario from tuberculosis. Truly, consumption is the most terrible disease in the world. It is the result of germs attacking the weak spot.

For a quarter of a century Dr. T. A. Slocum, one of the most eminent scientists of the day, has made the cure of consumption a life study and has succeeded in compounding a system of treatment which positively destroys the germ that produces the disease, at the same time building up the system and creating flesh and blood. There is no humbug about Dr. Slocum, he knows exactly what his treatment will do and affirms emphatically that it cures in ninety per cent of cases. The doctor has such confidence in the Slocum system that he offers treatment POSITIVELY FREE to all who desire a cure. Here is the offer:

You or your sick friends can have a FREE course of Treatment. Simply write to THE T. A. SLOCUM CHEMICAL Co., Limited, 179 King St. West, Toronto, giving post office and express office address, and the free medicine (The Slocum Cure) will be promptly sent.

When writing for them always mention this paper.

Persons in Canada, seeing Slocum's free offer in American papers will please send for samples to the Toronto laboratories.

The Guns of the Nations.

The naval strength of the Great Powers of Europe, the United States and Japan, as far as artillery is concerned, is given by a reliable German authority, as follows:—

Great Britain, 10,240 guns; France, 5,052 guns; Russia, 3,606 guns; Germany, 2,864 guns; Italy, 2,508 guns; United States, 2,324 guns; Japan, 1,592 guns. It must be mentioned that in the figures of the British artillery there are not included 340 muzzle-loaders, with which, of course, only the older vessels of the reserve fleet are armed.

Comparing the artillery of Great Britain with the combined strength of Russia and France, we arrive at 10,240 guns against 8,659 guns As far as torpedo tubes are concerned, however, the British fleet is inferior to the number of 15 tubes. Great Britain possesses 1,534; Russia and France 1,553 torpedo lancers.

The above comparisons have, of course, but a mechanical value, as not only the number of guns, but, perhaps, to a higher degree, their quality plays the greatest part in battle.

Benedick—It is said that most of the people who commit suicide are unmarried. How are you going to get round that?

O'Batch—Oh, well, I s'pose after a fellow has been married awhile he gets so he can put up with almost anything.

'Lester dear,' said Mrs Giddings, anxiously to her husband, 'I don't like that cough of yours'

'I'm sorry,' replied Giddings, 'but it is the best I have.'

'I should like to subscribe to your paper. Would you be willing to take it out in trade?'

Country Editor—Guess so: What's your business?

'I m the undertaker.'

Father—What do you mean by kissing my daughter? I don't like it.

Young Staylate—Don't you? Well, I do!
