The Carleton Sentinel.

FRIDAY, JUNE 7, 1901.

Published by THE CARLETON SENTINEL PUBLISHING CO., at their Office, in VANWART'S BRICK BUILDING, King Street, Woodstock, up stairs.

CANADA'S revenue keeps growing. The returns of the custom revenue, for the month of May, amount to $2,426,515, compared with $2,261,183 in May 1900, an increase for the last month of $165,332.

THERE seems to be no doubt that Sir Louis Davies will take the place on the Supreme Court Bench, vacated by the death of the late Judge King, and that Hon. H. R. Emmerson will succeed him in the Cabinet.

CANADA performed an act of graceful courtesy in granting permission for two American gunboats to pass through the Canadian canals to the great lakes for drill. No possible injury can arise from this act, on the part of the Dominion government; it at once testifies to the good feeling existing in Canada towards the neighboring republic, and at the same time confidence in her own strength.

THE Lieutenant Governor and Council at a meeting on Tuesday evening of this week passed an Order in Council, changing the site of the Carleton County Gaol from the old site to the Town of Woodstock, thus giving the Municipal Council full power to proceed with the erection of the new building in Town. We have also been informed that Mr. Mott, the architect, has his plans all prepared and, no doubt, work will be commenced before the middle of June.

A STRIKE is on at Sydney. All the Union labor men at the Steel Company's works as well as those laboring in other parts of the town have joined the strike. There is no dissatisfaction on account of the wages paid, but their contention is for the nine hour day. As yet there is no confusion, nor anything noticeable of an unusual character about the streets, to indicate a strike was on, and it is generally supposed that a mutually satisfactory settlement between the employers and the Union will be reached in a few days.

The Joint High Commission.

The meeting of the Joint High Commission, for the purpose of considering and, if possible, the settling of all matters now in dispute between Canada and the United States, is looked forward to with hopeful anxiety. The time of meeting will be settled upon by representatives of the two governments interested. At the time of adjournment of the commission, the subject of the Alaska boundary question was unsettled, and over this matter there was much divergence of opinion. The Montreal Witness, in a late issue, thus discusses the subject: The scope of the commission will neither be wider nor narrower than it was in previous meetings. It will be recalled that the commission adjourned in consequence of a failure to reach any settlement in regard to the Alaska boundary question. Canada offered to refer the whole question to arbitration on exactly the same conditions upon which the United States demanded that Great Britain should arbitrate the Venezuelan boundary question. The United States declined to accept in their own case what they had declared was just and reasonable in the case of Great Britain. The manifest inconsistency of the United States aroused a great deal of indignation, especially on the part of the representative on the commission of the Imperial Government, Lord Herschell, who was famous as an absolutely fair-minded man, as well as of the Canadians, who, however, being better acquainted with the character of American diplomacy, were not so annoyed as the imperial commissioner. The American government then proposed to separate the Alaska boundary question from the other questions before the commission, and complete the settlement of the other questions. But as the Canadian commissioners had made concessions in regard to the fisheries, reciprocity and other questions in order to procure corresponding concessions from the United States in regard to the Alaska question, such an agreement would have been unjust to Canada. The Alaska question was then referred to the regular diplomatic officers of the United States and Great Britain in the hope that some basis of agreement might thus be reached, and the Joint High Commission adjourned without having accomplished anything. It was generally believed that it would never meet again. Though no basis of settlement or agreement as to arbitration of the Alaska question has been reached by the diplomats, a modus vivendi was arranged directly between the governments of the United States and Canada as to a provisional frontier line where the routes run from Lynn Inlet to Yukon territory thus settling all customs troubles and mining right disputes.

The present position of affairs is more favorable to Canada, whose communications with the Yukon are now on a fairly satisfactory footing. When the Joint High Commission again meets, therefore, it will, as before, have the Alaska boundary question before it for settlement. Doubtless the British Commissioners will again urge upon the United States the acceptance of the practice of arbitration, to which the United States has so deeply committed itself, in theory. There is some reason to believe that the coming meeting of the commission has been arranged by Canada in view of the desire of the Newfoundland government to establish better commercial relations between the island and the United States. Mr. Bond, when Premier of Newfoundland, negotiated with the then American Secretary of State a treaty providing for a measure of reciprocity between Newfoundland and the United States, and also as to fisheries and fish products, the United States agreeing to admit Newfoundland fish to its markets on favorable terms, and Newfoundland admitting American fishermen to the coast bait and herring fisheries. This treaty was subject to the sanction of the British government, which declined to sanction it, or at least postponed doing so at the instance of the Canadian government, which pointed out that the Canadian as well as Newfoundland interests were at stake in any arrangement with the United States as to the fisheries, and that any agreement between Newfoundland and the United States would tend to weaken Canada in negotiating a settlement of her fisheries questions with the United States.

The Bond-Blaine treaty has, therefore, been awaiting the conclusion of a treaty between the United States and Canada, much to the dissatisfaction of Newfoundland which charges that her interests are being subordinated to those of Canada. It was stated a few days ago that the Bond-Blaine treaty had lapsed, but this is not so as no period was fixed for its expiry in case it was not sanctioned, and neither of the parties to it has cancelled it. Newfoundland had a representative in the Joint High Commission and will be again represented. There does not seem to us much hope of the settlement of the Alaska boundary question. It seems more probable that the United States government will be willing to negotiate a wider measure of reciprocity than was before agreed upon, and it is to be hoped, in the commercial interests of both countries, that such a measure will be agreed to. The United States is now far more favorable to reciprocity than when the commission last sat, and Canada is in a much better position to exact fair terms. There is plenty of room for a fair measure of reciprocity between Canada and the United States without abolishing or even greatly diminishing the preferential treatment of Great Britain.

THE CENSUS.

THE SENTINEL has been making inquiries from different sources and while the information we have received is not official, yet it is probably pretty nearly a correct estimate of the result of the recent census, so far as the population of the County of Carleton is concerned, which is as follows:—

Wicklow.....	1,910
Wilmot.....	1,819
Simonds.....	767
Wakefield.....	1,546
Richmond.....	1,699
Kent.....	2,502
Aberdeen.....	1,204
Peel.....	1,201
Brighton.....	2,791
Northampton.....	1,125
Woodstock Parish.....	1,712
"          Town.....	2,984
	21,260

This shows a decrease of something more than a thousand since the last census. The returns of 1891 showing the population by Parishes as follows:—

Wicklow.....	2,241
Wilmot.....	1,927
Simonds.....	756
Wakefield.....	1,751

The lower end of the Corporation drive (Woodstock to Fredericton) reached Woodstock Monday evening, and on Tuesday proceeded up river to meet the upper end on its way down. At last reports the upper end was at Beechwood.

U. N. B. Encoenia.

Several newspaper errors have crept into the reports of the recent U. N. B. examinations, but the following is a correct statement of results so far as Carleton county is concerned.

GRADUATES.

John E. Page, Tracey Mills, B. A. with first class honors in Classics. First class distinction certificates in Latin and Greek.

D. W. Hamilton, Florenceville, B. A. with first class honors in Natural Science and Chemistry. Distinction certificates of first class in Geology, Zoology, Chemistry and Physics. Also winner of Governor General's gold medal for general proficiency in Science.

The following Carleton county students received distinction certificates:—

In Science and Chemistry, W. L. Tracey, Hartland.

In Physics, T. J. Allen, Florenceville.

In Science, Miss Janie Kinney, Florenceville.

In Mathematics and Physics, P. B. Perkins, Centreville.

In the history of the U. N. B. only once before has the Governor General's medal come to Carleton Co., and the little village of Florenceville claims both. It was won in 1893 by H. H. Hagerman of Florenceville.

Dr. J. R. Inch, Chief Superintendent of Education, in presenting the medal to Mr. Hamilton, said in part:—

"The remark has been made this evening that St. John students seem to be claiming a large share of the honors. It is a pleasure to note though that the Governor General's gold medal, the highest and most prized of all college honors, goes to a student from the fine county of Carleton, from the beautiful little village of Florenceville. Carleton county is to be congratulated upon claiming such a student."

"Mr. Hamilton, it was not a surprise to me to learn that you had won this medal, because I have known of your success in the past in the teaching profession, and have noted the distinctions won by you each year at this University."

"I hope that you will continue in the teaching profession in this province and do much more towards elevating the profession in this country. Every school taught by a U. N. B. graduate should be a recruiting ground for this University."

"Remember that this honor means increased responsibility on your part. From him who wins most, most is expected."

"I hope that you will continue to win honors for yourself and be an honor not only to your Alma Mater but to your native province."

CHARLES S. JAMESON.

The friends and neighbors of Mr. Charles S. Jameson were shocked to hear of his sudden death which occurred at his home last Monday afternoon. The deceased was in his usual good health, and was leaving the house to enter his carriage when he was stricken down. He leaves a large circle of friends and relatives to mourn their loss. Among the latter are his wife, one daughter, and five sons. The esteem in which Mr. Jameson was held was attested by the large number of teams which followed his remains to St. John's church where the service was said by the Rev. A. W. Teed. His body was tenderly carried to its last resting place by his three sons, Henry N. Jameson, John H. Jameson, Dr. Jameson, and his son-in-law G. E. Tracy.

The lower end of the Corporation drive (Woodstock to Fredericton) reached Woodstock Monday evening, and on Tuesday proceeded up river to meet the upper end on its way down. At last reports the upper end was at Beechwood.
