

How many mothers realize that when the baby's advent is expected they need strength for two instead of one. Women, weak, nervous, just able to drag around, find themselves confronted with coming maternity. They have not strength enough for themselves, how can they have strength to give a child? We don't look for the birth of strong ideas from a weak mind. Why should we expect the birth of strong children from weak mothers?

The way to ensure health and strength to mother and child is to use Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription as a preparative for motherhood. It brings the mother's strength up to the requirements of nature, so that she has strength to give her child. It nourishes the nerves and so quickens them. It encourages a natural appetite and induces refreshing sleep. "Favorite Prescription" makes weak women strong and sick women well. There is no alcohol in "Favorite Prescription" and it is free from opium, cocaine and all other narcotics.

It is wish to let you know the great benefit my wife derived through taking your "Favorite Prescription," writes Mr. Robert Harden, of Brandon, Manitoba, Box 235. "It was when her baby came. We had heard so much of your medicine that my wife decided to try it. I may say my wife's age was thirty-five and this was her first child. She commenced to take 'Favorite Prescription' five months before her child was born. She was a healthy girl, and we believe that this was mainly owing to the 'Favorite Prescription,' taken faithfully according to directions. We shall certainly recommend it wherever we can."

Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser, paper covers, is sent free on receipt of 31 one-cent stamps to pay expense of customers and mailing only. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

A Georgian exchange says: "At a revival meeting a man arose and said that he was the wickedest man in the town. 'I'd go to perdition if I should die to-night,' he concluded. Immediately an old deacon started the hymn 'If you get there before I do, look out for me, I'm coming, too.' And then the deacon wondered why everybody laughed."

Client—Well, did I make a good witness?

Lawyer—Yes; between you and that stupid jury you took some pounds out of my pocket.

Client—Why, I won the case, didn't I?

Lawyer—That's just the point. I wanted a chance to appeal.

Tommy—Father, didn't you say we had a new baby?

Father—Yes, my son, why?

Tommy (in a tone of conviction)—Well, you've been regularly taken in. It's as old as anything—quite bald, and not a tooth in its head.

Pat—Did you hear that old Hogan was dead, Mrs. Ryan?

Is he, thin, poor man? Sure, I always knew that would be the end of him.

'What nice things you said about that man in his obituary notice! Don't suppose you'd say such nice things of me?' said the citizen.

'Oh, yes, I would, with pleasure.'

'Tom, whom did you say our friend B—married?'

'Well, he married $200,000; I forget her other name.'

Cassidy—Ye say McFee intered ther foight as an unknown?

Dugan—Yis, awn he wor unknown whin th' ither fillow got t'ro wid him.

"Forget thee!" wrote a young man to his girl. "Forget thee! When the earth forgets to revolve, when the stars forget to shine, when the rain forgets to fall, when the flowers forget to bloom then will I forget thee."

Three months later he was going to see another girl with sandy hair and freckles, and some thousands of pounds in the bank.

One of Judge Howland's stories had to do with the old Maine farmer who had been married four times. Shortly after the death of his fourth wife a neighbor stopped him and said:

"Mornin', Cyrus. How's the wife this mornin'?"

"Waal, to tell ye the truth," replied Cyrus, "I'm kinder out of wits just now."

Bird, Snake, and Animal in One.

A little creature found in South America by a party of naturalists is a relic of bygone ages.

It is known as the crested hoatzin, and the adult bird is about as big as a peacock.

The young birds, when hatched, have four legs, the front pair being reptilian in character, and have strong claws. This makes the creature look like a bird, beast and snake all in one.

As the birds grow older the claws fall off, the legs become fattened, feathers grow on them and they develop into wings.

The nestlings are the nearest approach to a reptile that can be found among birds, and they can climb and dive and swim with great facility.—New York Journal.

A GREAT SCHEME.

HERE'S A NEW WRINKLE IN THE ART OF GETTING VOTES.

One of the men who will enter the next congress as a member of the house makes this honest confession:

"You know that my district is too close for comfort. One evening I had a big meeting in a locality where it was a toss up which party would win out at the polls. I had not lived all my years in the district, but I challenged any man within the hearing of my voice to put his finger on a single act of mine that so much as suggested want of honesty or manliness."

"A weakened little old chap arose in the back of the hall and in a shrill, nasal voice read what purported to be a clipping from a western newspaper, the date being in the early seventies. In it I was charged with getting all my poultry from a neighbor's chicken coop, with being a Sunday school superintendent and a blind and with decamping between two days with $5,000 of my partner's money."

"The audience looked black and muttered ominously. I dramatically called for the clipping, and it was brought to me by a young man in the audience while I was denying the accusations in burning language and branding them as the contemptible products of a desperate opposition."

"I read the article aloud and then asked for a few hours in which to refute it by telegraphic evidence. Suddenly I braced up, tried the paper between my finger and thumb, held it between me and the light and jubilantly exclaimed: 'Gentlemen, I know something about paper, as I'm interested in a factory. This is made from wood fiber, and there were no wood fiber mills 30 years ago.'

"Then I scorched and roasted with mighty indignation until I had the crowd in a frenzy and it rushed forth to wreak vengeance on my traducers after a unanimous vote to support me. It was a small town, and they searched house after house, but failed to find their victim."

Where was he?"

"Well, of course they didn't go through my house. The dear old chap was my favorite uncle. Great scheme, wasn't it?"—Detroit Free Press.

Croupy Coughs of Children.

The tendency to croup is a foe that all parents have to fight. Croup comes in the night, when the help must be right at hand if it is to be helped at all. Adamson's Botanic Cough Balsam is a blessing to all families where there are children subject to attacks of croup or any mean cough. It has a wonderful reputation for its efficiency and fully deserves it.

You cannot tell what night your child may wake up choking to death with croup. In such a case what do you do? Send for a doctor and wait an hour, or perhaps two hours, while the child is gasping for breath? How much simpler where the true specific for croupy coughs and all throat troubles is right at hand. Indeed, no other way is safe with young children in the house.

Adamson's Cough Balsam is a most delicate medicine for children, relieving the little throats at once. Its action is soothing and certain. It clears out the phlegm, which produces the croupy condition, and it is a safeguard which no mother, who knows about it, will dispense with. All coughs and inflammation of the throat or bronchial tubes are cured by the Balsam with promptness that surprises. All druggists sell it, 25c. The genuine has "F. W. Kinsman & Co." blown in the bottle.

Two Faith Cure Cases.

Two arraignments under the law which have recently been had in Illinois and New York, respectively, appear to have temporarily established the responsibility of parents in those states for providing medical advice for children in illness. In New York a fine of $500 has been imposed upon a father who relied upon faith cure in the instance of an infant of two years' suffering from pneumonia. Parents, according to what is laid down here, may decide for themselves in the case of their own attacks by disease, but the judges say that the community has a right to insist upon medical aid for helpless children. A British Columbia court has decided to the contrary, however, in a similar case. It holds that medical assistance is not a necessary, even for a child, if its parents honestly and conscientiously object to medicine and implicitly trust in "divine healing." The principle, presumably, is that a parent cannot be expected to do for his child what he would do for himself.

HAPPY RESULT

OF THE USE OF

"MORIN'S WINE CRESO-PHATES"

In a Case of Bronchitis.

Perfect Cure of Mr. A. Lortie, of Quebec.

Mr A. LORTIE, of Quebec, thus describes his cure by "MORIN'S WINE CRESO-PHATES." The beginning of the trouble, said he, was a heavy cold which turned into Bronchitis. I could never make you understand all my sufferings during my long and cruel illness. I had sharp headaches, fits of dizziness accompanied by keen pains in the breast and sides. I was frightfully pale and so weak that it was believed I had fallen into consumption. Personally I was very anxious for my fate.

Several friends visited me regularly. Each advised me to take such or such medicine, while those whom I consulted stated that I was suffering from acute bronchitis. Remedies were given me which I took according to directions without doing me any notable good.

One day I saw the advertisement of "MORIN'S WINE CRESO-PHATES" in the newspapers and it struck me that it might cure me. I got some and began to take it. I was astonished at its rapid curative effect.

"MORIN'S WINE CRESO-PHATES" completely restored me, giving me back my former strength and vigor. I can now work without other fatigue than that naturally attendant upon prolonged and hard labor. Although I have been cured of that terrible Bronchitis, I always keep this remedy in the house. I use it from time to time as a tonic and always with the most satisfactory results.

I shall always be happy to recommend your unrivalled remedy in all cases of Cold, Bronchitis, etc.

Pulls Teeth With His Fingers.

THE CHINESE PLAN FAR SUPERIOR TO THE FORCEPS, SAYS A DENTIST.

Indianapolis, May 31.—Dr. Chas. E. Coughlin has discarded the forceps in pulling teeth and has adopted the primitive rules of the Chinese by using nothing except his thumb and index finger for the purpose. He believes that the sight of the forceps constitutes the harrowing part of tooth pulling and that many nervous persons are almost as shocked at the instrument as they would be if a cocked revolver were presented at their heads. He can take out the most firmly-rooted double tooth in a few seconds, and that without causing pain, comparatively speaking.

"It is all done with the thumb and forefingers of the right hand," he said to-day, "and does not require any great strength, for it is not performed by main force."

"In pulling a tooth by hand, it is first worked around with a gentle motion and there is absolutely no violent wrenching and tugging. In a surprisingly short time the largest and most firmly-rooted molar will show evidences of being loosened. The motion is then continued with an increased pressure outward from the pivot of the tooth, as it were, until it seems actually to come out of its own accord. It is brought with a final circular twist, not more violent than the gentle working which is required to loosen it, and it is all over before the patient realizes that his tooth is being extracted."

"It is ridiculously easy when you have got the hang of it. The tooth always comes out, and my patients testify that it is a comparatively painless process, the movements of the tooth being so gradual as not to produce any shock even to the most nervous person."

I learned the process from a Chinese practitioner. It had been practised by the Chinese from time immemorial. One method seems as crude and as barbarous to them as theirs seems antiquated to us.

"In many cases we are getting too far away from nature with our complicated apparatus and highly scientific way of going at things, and I have found that extracting teeth by hand is not only better for the patient, but also for the practitioner, for a man of sympathy must necessarily feel some of the horror caused by the forceps in an extremely nervous person, and just to the extent that he is incompetent to perform his duty well."
