HER FATHER WAS A DRUNKARD

A Plucky Young Lady Takes on Herself to Cure Her Father of the Liquor Habit.

STORY OF HER SUCCESS.

A portion of her letter reads as follows:

"My father had often p omised mother to stop drinking, and would do so for a time, but then returned to it stronger than ever. One day, after a terrible spree, he said to us: 'It's no use. I can't stop drinking.' Our hearts seemed to turn to stone, and we decided to try the Tasteless Samaria Prescription, which we had read stone, and we decided to try the Tasteless Samaria Prescription, which we had read about in the papers. We gave him the remedy, entirely without his knowledge, in his tea, coffee, or food regularly, according to directions, and he never knew he was taking it. One package removed all his desire for liquor, and he says it is now distastefu to him. His health and appetite are also wonderfully, improved, and no one would know him for the same man. It is now fifteen months since we man. It is now fifteen months since we gave it to him and we feel sure that the change is for good. Please send me one of your little books, as I want to give

THE TWO FATHERS.

The mother was a widow, an industrious woman, who worked late and early in order to support her child, a little girl between 4 and 5 years old, pretty as a fairy, full of fun, affectionate and coaxing as any happy child could be.

On the opposite side of the landing of the fifth floor on which Mme. Etienne and her daughter Lillie lived was the door of the apartments inhabited by two brothers, cabinet makers by trade and bachelors either by choice or by chance, no one knew. One of those days when the intense heat necessitates the door being left open in order to get a current of air, the prettiness of Lillie attracted the attention of the two brothers, who were already past their first youth and adored children in their quality of approaching old bachelorhood. From that a sort of intimacy sprung up between the widow and her neighbors. Little reciprocal services passed between them. They sometimes made a party of pleasure on the Sunday. So well did they get on indeed that one day the eldest of the two brothers said to the other:

'That child would want a father 'That is my opinion also.'

'Would you have any objection to my asking the mother to marry me?' 'Why should I? In fact, I was thinking of doing the same myself. But since you have spoken first follow the notion up, but on one condition that you will let me see Lillie as often as I like. I love that child as much as if she were my own.'

'Forsooth! You will live with us.' The question agreed upon, the two brothers, dressed in their best, went noticed a caterpillar crawling along, to call on Mme. Etienne, whom, how-ever, they found confined to bed. Occasionally the ants would catch The evening before she had run in up to the caterpillar, and one would order to take some work back to the jump on his back and bite him. shop in time; on returning she had caught a chill, passed a feverish

They went to live at Vincennes so that Lillie might have plenty of good air and take walks in the wood. They were very proud of their adopted daughter. When people stopped to look at them and asked in a casual way which was her father, they replied, "Both of us." Lillie seemed to like one as well as the other and called them Uncle John and Uncle James.

When she grew a little older they put her to school—to a young ladies' school be it understood—taking her there every morning and calling for her in the evening. So Lillie grew up between these two affections with-out ever feeling the want of father or

She cost the brothers a great deal of money, did the little one, but bah, they went no longer to the cafe and worked a little more than formerly. Teese supplementary hours were devoted to the pleasure and toilet of mademoiselle.

When she was 15 years of age, she was the first to suggest that she should stay at home for the future, at which, of course, the brothers were enchanted. What a charming little housekeeper they had then and with what joyful tenderness she greeted there return every evening! To say the spoiled child never abused their goodness would be saying too much, but at least she seized every

'And then,' continued the other, think how sad it would be for us to part from Lillie—never again to see her trotting about the house, never to hear her merry voice singing after we return from work of an evening.'
'I have been thinking of all that for a long time, my dear John.'
'It must be put an end to.'
'And your plan?'
'It is very simple if it pleases you.
I shall marry her before she gets shall marry her before she gets fond of any one else.'

'Zounds!'

The elder brother stood up, almost threatening.
'I also have thought of that plan. I was often going to speak about it, but always held back.'
'Why?'

'Because I wanted to marry Lillie myself.' The two brothers looked at one another far from amiably. Then the younger said: 'This is the same as with the mother formerly. Do you remember,

James? I gave her up to you. It is your turn now to give Lillie up to me. You are three years older than I.'

A Strange Combat.

A traveller in South Africa tells of a queer combat he once visited. He speak of marriage.

Inflammation of the lungs carried away the poor woman in ten days.

Thanks to the two brothers, she had not to go to the hospital, and until the last she was able to see her little Lillie, whom she earnestly recommended to them. They swore never to abandon the child.

The funeral over they took charge of the little case kissing her. They entire force of ants pounced upon the caterpillar and killed it at once.

Those "Good Old Times."

Grant, if you think, that this is an age of shoddy, of popular intellectual superficiality, of blind social antagonism, of selfish warfare and of aggressive materialism, nevertheless this world is not "ali a fleeting show," whatever Diogenes, Schopenhauer, Calvin, Moore and the rank and file of pessimists in prose and verse may say to that effect. On the contrary it is a very desirable world, and this is the very best age that has ever come to the children of men. There has never been a of men. There has never been a time in human history when there was so much enterprise, knowledge, wisdom, heroic self sacrifice and love to God and man as there is today. The "good old times" compare about as favorably with these times as a tallow candle with an electric light.

Called Hope and Ambition, and Love and Charity, and Home. And of them all, the last is the most beautiful. Besides these are many others smaller in extent, whence the traveller obtaineth refreshment during the weary journey through life.

Many a military hero would dread to have told the story of how he was taught to win his battles. Especially would he dislike the reminder if the lesson had come in the form of a sound drubbing at the hands of a girl. A recent English visitor to Wales picked up the following story of Arthur Wellesley at the Trevor homestead, upon the Welsh frontier. Memories of the great Duke of Wellington hang about the place, for his grandmother great Duke of Wellington hang about the place, for his grandmother was a Trevor, Lady Dungannon, and here the future conqueror of Napoleon was wont to spend his holidays when a boy at Eton. Here, too, he experienced the most serious defeat of his memorable career; for, falling into a quarrel with a farmer's son over a game of marbles, he became engaged into a hand to hand fight. The future Duke was doing well, and was about to hoist the flag of victory, when the farmer boy's sister came running out with a wet towel. The advent of the Prussians at Waterloo was scarcely more fortunate for the duke and his friends than the arrival of this girl was for than the arrival of this girl was for his boyish enemy. Nor, according to all accounts, was the defeat of the French more cutting than the utter discomfiture of young Wellesley upon this occasion.

A BLESSING TO MANKIND. What Is Being Said Regarding Dr. Clarke's Little Red Pills.

To the Editor of Carleton Sentinel: SIR-I was afflicted for years with rheumatism and stomach troubles, and was at times quite unable to walk. Six boxes of Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills effected a perfect cure. I consider them a blessing to mankind. Andrew Scott, State street, Rochester, N. Y.

Thomas F. Gallivan, Marlbank, Ont., writes: "Everyone knows of my case, which is of 17 years standing. The pills are giving good results."

Dr. R. King, one of the leading physicians of Ontario, when asked for his opinion regarding Dr. Clarke's Little Red Pills, said: "They are the best pill in the market, and will soon become famous."

Dr. Clarke's Little Red Pills are a positive and certain cure for la grippe, rheumatism, asthma, paralysis, catarrh, coughs, backache, indigestion, all stomach and liver troubles, female 'As a matter of fact we have. You ove us very much, say?'

Their bodies were found next morning lying together in a small clump of bushes. Both used the same weapon and Canby evidently died first, as the revolver was found in Brown's hand. Each put the muzzle of the revolver in his mouth and blew the top his head off. They had confessed to a shortage in the bank's funds of $81,000.

WHY CROUP IS FATAL.

When croup attacks your child you must be ready for it. It comes as an accompaniment to an ordinary cough, or it may attack without warning. All ills of children de-Pausing, the caterpillar would turn his head and bite the ant, and thus appears there should be something at hand night and was not able to rise in the morning. She begged her neighbors to go for a doctor. It was no time to speak of marriage.
