

Your Nose

That is what you should breathe through—not your mouth.

But there may be times when your catarrh is so bad you can't breathe through it. Breathing through the mouth is always bad for the lungs, and it is especially so when their delicate tissues have been weakened by the scrofulous condition of the blood on which catarrh depends.

Alfred E. Yingse, Hoernerstown, Pa., suffered from catarrh for years. His head felt bad, there was a ringing in his ears, and he could not breathe through one of his nostrils nor clear his head.

After trying several catarrh specifics from which he derived no benefit, he was completely cured, according to his own statement, by

Wet Wedding Days Preferred.

The adage "Happy is the bride that the sun shines on" is one that is unknown in many lands. A Breton bride takes it unhappily when the day of her wedding dawns bright and sunny. Rain on her marriage morn is held to signify that all her tears are shed and that she will therefore have a happy married life.

It is said that the Erza of Simbrisk calls the day before the wedding the weeping day, and the bride and her girl friends weep as much as possible with the idea of getting the mourning of life over, so that only what is joyful may remain. In some countries this result is attained by sousing the bride with water. The Greeks think that a thorough drenching of the bride will bring her lasting good fortune.

COUGHING ALL NIGHT.

It's this night coughing that breaks us down, keeping us awake most of the time, and annoying everybody in the house. Lots of people don't begin to cough until they go to bed. It gets to be so that retiring for the night is an empty form, for they cannot rest.

Adamson's Botanic Cough Balsam makes life worth living to such people by its soothing effect on the throat. The "tickling sensation" promptly disappears when the use of the Balsam is begun, and the irritation goes with it. This medicine for cough hasn't a disagreeable thing about it, and it does efficient service in breaking up coughs of long standing. It is prepared from barks and roots and gums of trees, and is a true specific for throat troubles.

Handling coughs is a science that every one should learn. Not knowing how to treat them has cost many fortunes and many lives. In Adamson's Balsam there are the elements which not only heal inflammation, but which protect the inflamed parts from further irritation. The result of this is that the tendency to cough does not manifest itself, and you are surprised at it. Afterward you would not be without Adamson's Balsam at hand. This remedy can be tested. 25 cents at any druggist's.

In San Francisco the liquor shops keep open all day, all night and all Sunday.

Religion of Healthy-Mindedness.

Perhaps I am wrong, but it appears to me, that men who spend their lives among the "submerged tenth" must carry with them the "religion of healthy-mindedness," and after all is said and done "healthy-mindedness is the essence of the primitive Christianity," writes Lally Bernard in the Globe. The Christus handed down his teaching through the medium of men who had lived healthy, open-air lives, whose environment was the very opposite of that of the great scholars and philosophers of the times. All the most notable acts of the sacred life on earth were performed in the freedom of God's sunshine, and face to face with nature. To keep the balance of things just the Christus did not despise social functions in moderation, and particularly sanctioned those feasts and fetes connected with the sentiments of family life. He recognized the necessity of certain healthy occasions of intercourse among men, sanctioned marriage feasts and various forms of eastern etiquette as conducing to the well-being of the people, while he called apart certain individuals to His work and to propagate His Word; but the usual routine of life was little upset by his coming or His acceptance of hospitality. Surely in its suitability to enter the intimate life of the human family, to arrange itself in conformity with healthy-minded secular customs. Christianity as a religion stands supreme, the true religion of "healthy-mindedness."

Dressing Well, at Small Cost, is Easily Accomplished.

Diamond Dyes enable thousands of women to dress well at small cost. One or two packages of some fashionable color of the Diamond Dyes will give new life and beauty to any old and cast off skirt or dress. Your faded cape or jacket of last year can be colored a rich black, navy, seal brown or dark bottle green, and made to look as if it came new from the store. Your husband's suit and children's clothes may, with a little care, be made as good as new.

Now is the time to dye your rugs for the making of pretty mats and rugs. If you desire a novel and stylish pattern, buy one of the Diamond Dye Mat and Rug Patterns, now sold by the majority of dry goods merchants everywhere. These beautiful patterns are colored on the best Scotch Hessian and ready for working. If your dry goods dealer does not keep them, send to The Wells & Richardson Co., Limited, Montreal, for design sheets. Mailed free to any address.

SHOOT, IF YOU DARE.

HOW THE UNION JACK AND STARS AND STRIPES SAVED A MAN.

To the Anglo-American Magazine, Dr. J. George Hodgins contributes an interesting paper on Incidents of International Courtesy, and recalls some notable occasions on which British and Americans have stood by one another. The incident at the battle of the Taku Forts, when Commodore Tatnall joined in the fray, with the cry "Blood's thicker than water," is well known, but the following story will be new to most English readers. It was related at Montreal in 1881 by the Rev. Dr. J. O. Peck. Dr. Peck said:

"The man who gave me the facts was Mr. Haskins, an American sailor, who had sailed to a port in Chili. On going ashore to enjoy his liberty he drank a little and became hilarious. One of the police officers, instead of warning him not to make a noise in the street, drew his sword, and knocked him down. On that, the American sailor got up and knocked the policeman down in return. He was arrested and tried and condemned to be shot in the morning of the following day. Mr. Loring, the American consul, expostulated with the authorities that it would be monstrous to shoot the man for such an offence; but they paid no attention to him, so he thereupon made a formal protest in the name of the United States government against the barbarous act. Mr. Kaskins, the sailor, was in the morning brought out, pinioned, to be shot. As the English consul was preparing to hoist the Union Jack he saw the crowd in the field opposite, where the execution of the American sailor, of which he had heard, was to take place. Rushing over to the American consul, he said: 'Good God! Loring, you're not going to let them shoot that man!' 'What can I do?' he said. 'I have protested against it. I can do no more.' Quick as thought the English consul shouted, 'Give me your flag!' and in a trice the Stars and Stripes were handed to the English representative. At once, taking his own Union Jack in his hand, he hastened across the field, elbowed his way through the crowd and the soldiery, and running up to the doomed man he folded the American flag around him and then laid the Union Jack over it. Standing a few paces back, he faced the officer and soldiery, and shouted defiantly: 'Now, shoot, if you dare, through the heart of England and America.' And they dared not do it, for they feared the consequences; so the man was at once released. In telling me," said Mr. Peck, "Mr. Haskins said to me, with tears streaming down his cheeks, even then, 'They loosed me then, and oh! how I longed to embrace those two flags!'"

THE AUSTRALIAN ARMY.

Two years ago, before the South African war broke out, such a heading as the above to a newspaper article would have caused a ripple of laughter to run through military circles in Britain. Possibly some of the experts may smile over it today, yet Mr. A. G. Hales, who uses it, says he will not alter the phrase, for he knows that in the immediate future Australia will possess an army three quarters of a million strong for home defence purposes. I do not think, he goes on, that that the Australian army will run much to plumes, feathers, and other millinery, which go to make a British army in peace time look like a toy concern got up to please the women. Rather, I fancy, will the Australian people turn towards the Americans for a model, though I must confess that "out South" some responsible men have a great weakness for military finery. It may be urged that the possession of a great citizen army by the Australians, with local factories for the manufacture of rifles, cannon, bayonets and ammunition, will weaken the tie that links the young land to the old. I do not think it will effect the loyalty of the colonies one way or another.

For the last 20 years all thinking Australians have known that if they wished to "cut the painter" no power on earth could stop them. But they do not want to cut it. Not that they dread parting with the protection of the British fleet, but because many of their wisest men believe that it is the destiny of Britain, America and Australia, some day, to stand face to face with the world—a vast triple alliance. To my mind, neither of those three nations needs a great standing army. I believe in the rifle hanging over the mantelpiece, and in the man sitting quietly by the hearth, knowing how to use it for home defence if called upon. There is a touch of quiet power, of sober self-reliance, about it that appeals to one. There was a time in Britain when every man worth calling a man could use a bow. Why not a rifle? No need for conscription then! That is the spirit that once ruled in America and is now waking to life in Australia—Scottish American.

sum is additional noteworthy when one is told that it is larger than the previous highest figures for the whole of the Khedive's dominions. Both imports and exports contributed to bring about this substantial expansion, the former showing an increase under nearly every class of goods, while exports owed their advance mainly to the high price of cotton, which more than compensated for the smaller yield occasioned by the low Nile. It is satisfactory to hear that the manufacturers at home shared to a corresponding degree in this improvement in Alexandria's trade. The total value of imports from Britain amounted to £5,055,000, against £4,157,000 in 1899, an increase of £898,000. According to the official statistics they represent 40 per cent. of the total imports, as compared with 41 per cent. in the previous year, although the Consul is careful to add that "it is not unlikely some goods coming through ports of Britain from other countries are described as British in the returns." Even allowing for such a contingency, there is little room for British traders to feel displeased with the figures.

INFANT MORTALITY.
MANY DEATHS LARGELY DUE TO IGNORANCE ON THE PART OF MOTHERS.
The disorders of children seem to the rugged and hearty grown persons to be simple and not particularly dangerous. This point of view on the part of parents has been the cause of the loss of thousands of baby lives. You will always find that the mothers who are successful in bringing up families of hearty happy children with scarcely a day's sickness, are always those who are careful to note the slightest evidence of illness and to check the difficulty at once. They do not belong to the class of mothers that stify their children with sleeping draughts and similar medicines containing opiates. They stick to the purely vegetable, healthful medicines which cure infantile disorders quickly, and of these Baby's Own Tablets are the best of all.

For colic, simple fevers, croup, constipation, diarrhoea, irritation when teething, indigestion and sleeplessness, these tablets are a quick, effective, never-failing cure. Dissolved in water, the smallest baby will take them without the slightest objection. Do not trifle with medicines concerning which you know nothing, when here is a time-tried remedy which is used constantly and with the best result in thousands of homes.

Mrs. H. H. Fox, Orange Ridge, Man., says: "I have found Baby's Own Tablets a perfect medicine for children of all ages, and would not be without them in the house. They are truly a baby comfort and mother's friend." Baby's Own Tablets can be found at drug stores, or will be sent postpaid upon receipt of price, 25 cents, by addressing the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Dept. T., Brockville, Ont.

Commercial Capital of Egypt.
Although Cairo is the political capital of Egypt, Alexandria is the commercial capital. Last year the aggregate value of exports from and imports into Egypt was £30,879,000, and of this volume of trade no less than £23,907,000, or 93 per cent., was claimed by Alexandria. The latter

Hacking

There is nothing so bad for a cough as coughing. It tears the tender membrane of the throat and lungs, and the wounds thus made attract the germs of consumption. Stop your cough by using the family remedy that has been curing coughs and colds of every kind for over sixty years. You can't afford to be without it.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

loosens the grasp of your cough. The congestion of the throat and lungs is removed; all inflammation is subdued; and the cough drops away.

Three sizes: the one dollar size is the cheapest to keep on hand; the 50c. size for coughs you have had for some time; the 25c. size for an ordinary cold.

"For 15 years I had a very bad cough. The doctors and everybody else thought I had a true case of consumption. Then I tried Ayer's Cherry Pectoral and it only took a bottle and a half to cure me."

Mr. Carnegie's Earthly Paradise.
Probably in the whole history of great landlords and large estates there is nothing comparable to the story of Mr. Andrew Carnegie's vast property in Scotland, Skibo Castle, Sutherlandshire—his earthly paradise, as he calls it. The Skibo property is a gigantic one. One can travel for thirty miles in a straight line without leaving Mr. Carnegie's domain. The Castle and its grounds are a wonderful blending of the romantic past and the scientific present. All the latest electrical and hygienic appliances are used within its walls, and yet in the grounds stand, religiously preserved, the walls of an old monastery of six hundred years ago. Even the quaint features of its old-world garden are zealously cherished.

A model dairy and a poultry farm are a part of the up-to-date features of the estate, and a piper in full Highland costume, who plays on the terrace every morning, lends the old-time picturesque touch necessary in the case of a Scottish chieftain. Producing fish, flesh, fowl, game, milk, butter, eggs, fruit, and vegetables, Mr. Carnegie's estate is practically independent of the outside world.

As for amusements, there are shooting, fishing, golfing, and yachting out of doors; and within, a billiard room, library, gymnasium, and marble sea water swimming bath. Add to these some hundreds of thriving and prosperous tenants, and the term "earthly paradise" seems appropriate.

F. G. Fanquier, government agent at Revelstoke, B. C. is reported as absconded with government money amounting to somewhere between $2,000 and $3,000.

Monotony Induces Insanity.

IT LEADS TO DEPRESSION, WHICH FINALLY DEVELOPS INTO MADNESS.

One would be pardoned for thinking that a man who earned his livelihood by working in the fresh air of the country, surrounded by sights delightful to the eye and refreshing to the mind, would be far less liable to brain diseases than the man sitting on a stool over a ledger in the stuffy atmosphere of a smoke dyed city. But if statistics prove anything they prove the worthlessness of that possible supposition. More agricultural laborers go mad per cent for per cent than any other workers. It is monotony which excites disinterestedness, which leads to depression, which develops into melancholia, which ends perhaps in a cure, possibly in a suicidal act, probably in an asylum. It may safely be said that Sunday saves thousands upon thousands from the madhouse. It is the one break from week to week which thousands of natures demand.

The agricultural laborer, the artisan and other similar classes of workers live in monotony broken here and there by a small incident which in time becomes itself monotonous. A man perhaps drives rivets. He drives them every day of the week except Sunday. Every motion of his work becomes mechanical. He has no interest in his work beyond what it finds for him on Saturday. He has one thing to do, and the more he does that the less he does everything else. Consequently the brain becomes weak for want of more general use and weakens until it snaps.

A fine thing is a healthy hobby, but a finer, especially for indoor workers, is a sport. Healthy recreation keeps more people out of the madhouse than anything the doctors could do. Nature demands a certain amount of balance, and she will have it or be revenged.—Exchange.

Devastating Power of Locusts.

A swarm of these insects stopped the advance of a Russian army. They filled the air and blinded both officers and men, so that the former could give no orders, and even if they had done so the men could not have obeyed them. The horses would not face them, and they lay on the ground many inches thick. Every man and horse in the army was incensed with the insects, and their clothing was literally eaten off the men as they stood helpless and blinded. The railways were useless, as the locusts covered the rails, and the oil which exuded from their bodies, when crushed, prevented the driving wheels from "biting." After they had settled, whole regiments were detached for the purpose of trampling them to death. Trenches were dug across their path and filled with burning coals, but the crowding swarms actually smothered the fire, so vast were their numbers.

Even in a little island like Cyprus, in one year, one fifth of the entire revenue was spent in destroying the locusts, and especially their eggs. When these eggs are laid, they are enclosed in a horny envelope called a "pod," each pod containing 35 eggs. In seven months 1,330 tons of pods were destroyed. Now, a single ton of pods contains 63,000,000 eggs, and yet, in spite of this almost incredible destruction, the locusts are still a dreadful plague and show little if any symptoms of diminution in numbers.

One hundred and eighteen Alpine climbers have lost their lives in Switzerland this year. This is the longest list ever reported since Alpine climbing became a fashionable pastime.
