Liquor Sellers' Responsibility.

If the men who supply their fellow-men with intoxicating drink were held responsible under the law in terms of money for any damage which the families of the latter might sustain as a result of their drinking, it would be likely to induce in the liquor seller some measure of caution as to how he puts the bottle to his neighbor's lips and made him drunk. That, under the laws of Indiana, liquor sellers are thus responsible, is the decision of a judge of the Supreme Court of that State. Thus, if a man under the influence of liquor, commits a crime for which he is sent to prison, the wife of the imprisoned man can bring suit against the man who supplied her husband with liquor, and if she can prove to the satisfaction of a jury that the liquor was so obtained, and that the crime resulted from the drinking of it, she can recover damages for the loss sustained on account of being deprived of her husband's support. It would be an excellent thing to have some of that Indiana law imported into this latitude. Here, in St. John, a man is licensed to sell liquor, he sells to his neighbor and the latter becomes drunk, and in consequence commits some crime or misdemeanor, is apprehended, convicted, and fined five, ten, twenty, fifty dollars, according to the offence. On whom is the fine assessed? Virtually on the man's wife and family, if he has a wife and family, and it comes out of the comforts and necessities of their life, while the licensed liquor seller goes on living most comfortably on the profits of his business and continuing to furnish his quota of drunks and criminals to the police court.

In this connection it is interesting to read the following paragraph from a report of Police Court proceedings in St. John, which appeared the other day in one of the daily papers of that city:

"John Magee and John Mitchell, who were on Monday remanded on a charge of vagrancy, were brought in from jail and dealt with. They were convicted of cutting too freely into the stronger brands of alcoholic stimulant and also of soliciting the cash necessary for the purchase of the aforesaid spirit from passers-by on the street. A heavy fine was imposed—that is, it would have been heavy if they had possessed the money to pay it, or had to spend a corresponding length of time in jail. But His Honor deemed it best not to send them to that institution of rest. The fine was $50 each or four months in jail, but the magistrate, after giving them some excellent advice, allowed the penalty to stand. It will be enforced if they are even seen entering a barroom. The police are now wondering how long it will be before Magee's thirst overcomes his desire for sweet liberty."

These men having no money and no families or friends to pay their fines, and being so utterly destitute of manhood that imprisonment without labor is no punishment to them, are let go with some excellent advice and a warning. If it had been the case of working men who had misbehaved themselves on account of contributing to the cash-box of the rum-seller the money much needed in their homes, they would no doubt have been heavily fined, and their families would have pinched and starved in order that the fines might be paid and the offenders kept out of prison. We are not saying certainly that men who get drunk and commit misdemeanors should not be punished, but we do say that it is a great hardship and injustice that the families who have already suffered cruelly because the wages necessary for their support are squandered at the dramshop, should suffer still more because a heavy fine must be paid, or because the breadwinner for the family is serving out a sentence in jail, while the keeper of the dramshop, who spreads his net for the working man, knowing quite well what the result is likely to be, is growing sleek and fat on the money which should have gone to feed and clothe the wives and families of men whom he has helped to make drunkards. Yet he is asked to pay no fines and to take no risks in connection with the fate of those whom his traffic destroys.

The following list of towns changed from "wet" to "dry" at the recent elections in Ohio, is given out by the Anti-Saloon League of that state: Alvordton, Lebanon, Turtle Creek township, South Lebanon, Pickaway township, Hicksville, Blanche, Blanchester, Middletown township, Jamestown, Quincy, Peebles, Harrisburg, Hamden, Larksville, Philo, prohibition mayor; Newton Falls, Bylesville and Johnstown.

To Tell the Age by the Teeth.

We have been asked to give the signs which indicate a horse's age by his teeth. The best authorities agree upon the following with respect to the mouth of the horse, and the number, condition and situation of the teeth, as indicating his age:

The foal is born with twelve grinders. When four front teeth have made their appearance the colt is twelve days old, and when the next four assert themselves its age will be about twenty-eight days. The corner teeth make their appearance when the foal is eight months; and these latter attain the height of the front teeth at the age of one year. The two-year-old has the kernel—the dark substance in the middle of the tooth's crown—ground out of all the front teeth. When three years old the middle front teeth are substituted by the permanent horse teeth. The next four teeth are shifted in the fourth year; and the corner teeth in the fifth give place to permanent nippers.

At five years of age the horse has forty teeth, of which twenty-four are grinders far back in the jaw. These are not considered in testing a horse's age. It must be remembered that horses have tusks, which mares rarely do. Before the age of six the tusk is full grown and has a slight groove on its internal surface (which generally disappears with age; the tusk itself becoming more rounded and blunt) and at the age of six the kernel or mark is worn out of the middle front teeth; the deep hole in the centre of the tooth with the blackened surface which it presents, and the elevated edge will have disappeared. The tusks have now obtained their full growth, being nearly or quite an inch in length; convex without, concave within tending to a point, and the extremity somewhat curved. The horse is said now to have a full or perfect mouth.

At seven years the mark, as described, is very nearly worn out of the four centre nippers and is fast wearing away in the corner teeth—especially with mares; but the black mark still remains in the very centre of the tooth and is not completely filled up until the animal is eight years old. As he gets past seven the bridle teeth begin to wear away.

At eight the kernel has entirely disappeared from the lower nippers and begins to decrease in the middle nippers. In the ninth year the mark has entirely disappeared from the upper middle teeth and the hook on the corner only has increased in proportion as the bridle teeth loose their points. At eight the upper surface of the nippers are all oval, and as the animal gets older they diminish in width, but not in thickness; they become more rounded and wider apart.

At twelve years of age the crown of the lower front teeth has become somewhat triangular and the bridle teeth much worn down. Anything further must be left to experts. It is well to mention the fact, however, that as horses advance in age their gums shrink away, conveying a long narrow appearance of teeth. They likewise lose their upright appearance and appear to lean forward, more particularly the upper ones, which assume an arched shape.

Aside from the indications of age afforded by the teeth are some others which are unmistakable. A dark colored horse—as a brown or bay—will turn gray about the face, mane and top of the tail. The back becomes hollow and the pit or cavity about the eyes gets, by degrees, more and more pronounced.

A horse's mouth can be "fixed" by a process called "bishingop", after the rogue that first practiced it, so that a cursory examination will not reveal the age. It is done by renewing the mark on the lower nipper. It is supposed to be done by a "graver". A cavity after the pattern of a seven year old is scraped out of the plain surface of the corner teeth, the hole is then finished with a hot iron, leaving a permanent mark very much like the natural. An experienced person, however, will not be deceived by it. A youthful appearance is given a horse's head sometimes by blowing up the cavities above the eyes.—Col. Edwards in the Newark Call.

Rhubarb Pie.

Steam the rhubarb, drain the water from it and beat the pulp until very fine. To one pint of this add one cupful of sugar, one dessert spoonful of flour, two beaten eggs and a saltspoonful of ginger. Bake in one crust and cover with the white of an egg beaten stiff with one tablespoonful of sugar. Place in the oven until the meringue is delicately browned.

SHE PATIENTLY BORE DISGRACE

A Sad Letter From a Lady Whose Husband Was Dissipated.

How She Cured Him With a Secret Remedy.

"I had for years patiently borne the disgrace, suffering, misery and privations due to my husband's drinking habits. Hearing of your marvelous remedy for the cure of drunkenness, which I could give my husband secretly, I decided to try it. I procured a package and mixed it in his food and coffee, and, as the remedy was odorless and tasteless, he did not know what it was that so quickly relieved his craving for liquor. He soon began to pick up flesh, his appetite for solid food returned, he stuck to his work regularly, and we now have a happy home. After he was completely cured I told him what I had done, when he acknowledged that it had been his saving, as he had not the resolution to break off of his own accord. I heartily advise all women afflicted as I was to give your remedy a trial."

In Europe.

CROPS BADLY DAMAGED BY FROST.

London, June 20—June, which began in western and southern Europe with premature, August-like heat, has become in the past week abnormally cold. Great Britain, France, Germany, Austria and Italy alike have suffered. Some nights have been absolutely frosty and the thermometer at Greenwich, on Tuesday, registered 28 degrees. There were similar temperatures in parts of France and Italy, while snow was common in Austria and Hungary. The weather has had the worst effect on the crop everywhere. It is stated that the wheat crop in France has been ruined. The almost unbroken drought in England during the month has destroyed the hay crop and seriously checked others. The temperature rose slightly on Wednesday and there was some rain.

Why a Girl Can't Throw.

A suburban physician, who has often been amused at the efforts of the Bryn Mawr girls, was talking the other day. "It is a physical impossibility for a girl to throw strongly and accurately, as a boy throws," he said. "A girl throws with a rigid arm, and it is out of the question for her to acquire a free movement, such as is possible with a boy, because her collar bone is larger and sets lower than a boy's. In other sports, where this action is not brought into play, she may excel; but she may as well give up all hopes of ever learning to throw."

Discontent.

Was any existence ever so bright that discontent had no place in it? Was any human soul ever without these strange longings for another life than which God has given? Was any heart ever so happy that it has not beat against its cage, yearning for better wings and wider flight? Was any glance ever so sunny that it did not turn from the brightness around it to gaze wistfully toward some distant spot of happier light? —Christian Reid.
