THE SALOON'S DEFENDERS ANSWERED.

National attention has been directed to the recent extraordinary utterances of Bishop Potter and Rev. Dr. Rainsford, of New York, on the saloon question. Substantially, the contention of these divines is:

1.—That the saloon is the working man's club, where he finds rest and recreation;

2.—That the saloon is the social resort most available to the working man, by reason of his restricted means; and

3.—That the "free lunch" feature in the saloon supplies excellent food at a remarkably low figure.

The Christian Herald, believing that this representation would not be accepted by any considerable number of thoughtful people, and, besides, that it grossly misrepresented the working men, invited a number of leading clergymen and others engaged in active Christian work, to express their views on the subject.

Their letters, which appear below, are, in every case, the outcome of observation and personal experience. They paint the drinking saloon in its true colours, as the worst foe of industry, thrift, morality, home comfort, and good citizenship, a maker of debauchees, drunkards, and ruined homes.

THE SALOON AN UNMIXED EVIL.

Rev. A. C. Dixon, Ruggles Street Baptist Church, Boston.

The saloon is an unmixed evil. It is not a place of rest, and recreation, nor a social resort for the working man unless he drinks. The saloon furnishes no free lunch to men who do not drink. All of its attractions are enticements to drink, and the good men who commend these baits, without seeing the man-trap behind them, are inexcusably short sighted. Some of them, I happen to know, are not total abstainers, and are, I fear, blinded to the evils of drink by their own social habits.

THE POOR MAN'S FOE.

Rev. J. O. Wilson, St. Andrew's Church, New York City:

1. The saloon is the working man's calamity where he finds poison for his stomach and moral degradation for his soul.

2. Is the saloon the social resort most available to the working man by reason of his restricted means? No; but in nine cases out of ten it is the occasion of the poor man's restricted means. The saloon is the poor man's remorseless robber. It not only steals the last penny of his earnings, but the cloths off his children's back and the bread from their plate. Countless thousands of poor men would be rich to-day but for the saloon, and countless thousands of rich men are on the road to poverty through the same open door.

3. Does the "free lunch" feature of the saloon argue in favour of Sunday opening? No; this is simply a bait to induce men to drink—a cold-blooded business transaction, utterly devoid of the least vestige of charity. This is a shrewd temptation worthy of the devil's ingenuity. I am thoroughly convinced that the saloon is the poor man's worst enemy, his conscienceless despoiler, physically, socially, intellectually, and morally. Hence, as a friend of the poor man, my attitude has been and will be that of uncompromising hostility toward the saloon. From my point of view, the closing of the saloon, the rescue of men from drunkenness, and the elevation of the poor, is not the "devil's work"—but the work of God.

No, the men who plead for an open saloon, and defame the noblest womanhood of the nation, and denounce as hypocrites honest reformers, and plead for the destruction of our American Sabbath—these are they who do the "devil's work," whether they be sensational clergymen, erratic politicians or high ecclesiastical.

WHAT THE SALOON REALLY IS.

Rev. I. M. Haldeman, pastor First Baptist Church, New York:

I am opposed to the saloon because it can be of advantage only to the brewer, the liquor dealer, the politician, and that class of Christian ministers who find more inspiration in a glass of wine than in the Spirit of God. And I might say that every Christian who loves his God, who loves his fellow man, should be outspoken and unqualified in his denunciation of it. Above all, every true Christian should be outspoken in his repudiation of that "Christian ministry" which glorifies the saloon, honours the bar-keeper, breaks down the restrictions of the Lord's Day; would fill our streets with drunkards; gives us the disgraceful "Continental Sunday," denounces men like John E. Gough, and forgetting that the women of the Temperance Union have gone about their work like angels of mercy, classes them as the devil's agents and their work as the devil's own.

USES OF SOLITUDE.

If we wish to cultivate our higher nature we must have solitude. It is vitally necessary at times that we should be able to get away from every other being on the face of the earth. What thoughtful person does not love to be alone; to be surrounded with no objects but the fields and the trees, the mountains and the waters, to hear nothing but the rustling of the foliage and the songs of the birds, and to feel the fresh breeze of heaven playing upon his cheeks? Moreover, when we are very much in contact with human life, when we are mingling with it, we are liable to become too conscious of its turbid side, or drearily oppressed with its commonplace features. To see human life, and weigh it in its many aspects, we need at times to go away and be as it were on a pinnacle, where we can take it all in with one sweeping glance. Solitude can affect us somewhat as religious worship does. It can take us out of the consciousness of where we belong, away from the ordinary selfish instincts by which we may be dominated. Too much solitude may be dangerous, just as too much of the sense of mystery may be. Yet something of it is essential to our advance in spiritual life. A man must go away where he can feel the mystery of his own being. Moreover, a certain degree of solitude seems necessary to the full growth of the mind, and it is in solitude that great principles are first thought out, and the genius of eminent men formed, for solitude is the nurse of enthusiasm, and enthusiasm is the real parent of genius. Solitude, moreover, is essential to any depth of meditation or of character, and is the cradle of thoughts and aspirations.—H. W. Smith.

Brain Power.

How It May be Strengthened and Increased.

The brain is a great nerve battery that presides over all the powers and impulses of the human body.

Very frequently, as a result of poor blood, it becomes enfeebled, and a general weakness of the entire system follows.

No remedy possesses the marvelous brain strengthening power that Ferrozone has demonstrated in thousands of cases.

It contains an abundance of phosphorus and iron which are essential in the formation of red vitalizing blood, and in this way supplies the brain with extra power to perform its numerous and important duties.

Ferrozone is the best preparation for brain workers, and those inclined to a sedentary life. It improves the appetite, insures good digestion, regulates the bowels, and helps the stomach to do its work.

Lawyers, ministers, and those whose occupation entails much thinking and brain labor, will find Ferrozone of immense value, because of its power to stimulate mental activity. Students who take Ferrozone regularly, find it not only clears the brain, and makes it more receptive but makes them strong in body as well as mind.

A medical student of Toronto University, who has proved the good quality of Ferrozone says: "On my study table there is always a place for Ferrozone. I find by keeping my digestion in perfect order, and maintaining a splendid appetite, it enables me to accomplish a great deal of hard work. I consider Ferrozone at the same time food for the brain, the blood and the nerves, and can highly recommend it."

Very few are so strong and healthy that a course of Ferrozone would not benefit. It is good for the young and old alike, and is prepared in convenient tablet form, price per box 50c, sold by all druggists, and N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

STRENGTH IN SOME FORM.

Men abhor cowards and still more sneaks, though I regret to say they often endure casts in a way that belies their intelligence and good taste. They have a quite pathetic desire to look up to men, to feel men their superiors in strength of body and of mind, in calmness of judgment and clearness of intellect. And it is indeed a pity that men so often seem to go out of their way to destroy their most cherished illusions.

Above everything a woman admires strength in a man. It may be strength of body—she will worship a Hercules with the brain of a guinea pig. It may be strength of intellect—she will adore a savant with the body of a gibbon monkey. It may be strength of character—she will break her heart for a politician or a financier who is unservingly wrapped up in dreams of personal advancement, and who possesses no more heart than an oyster. But strength in some form she craves unceasingly. It is a hereditary instinct that has been bequeathed to her through Eve's first disappointment when Adam was tried in the balance and found wanting. Woman, secretly conscious of her own physical weakness and lack of intellectual strength, demands strength from man to make up her own deficiencies. Even the strongest women, strong in body and mind, well balanced as Athena herself, though they may shield and profect the weakness of the men they love and stoop to help them, will never do so without a secret feeling of contempt which is destruction of all ideals. Man, in spite of that deplorable start made by Adam, was intended to be woman's protector and refuge from all harm, upon whom she could lean and rely in every event of life's pilgrimage, and when the roles are reversed, as they often, so unfortunately are, it is a bad thing both for man and woman. Strength, however is what women love in men.

The Struggle in Daily Life.

Man is not the industrious bee, or the ever-virtuous ant. Rather is he equally at the root of him, idle. His industry is an effort; his work is only partly a pleasure; he constantly relapses from the strain. Oftentimes he would fain shake off in fancy the awful yoke that lifts not night nor day, the call of work to be done. And it is not the highest in rank on whom life sits easiest. The slave, as he is called, has his hours of rest, his rude amusements; the laugh in the kitchen sounds often louder than in the drawing-room. The weight of responsibility is removed; whereas in the ruling members of the household noblesse oblige presses with perpetual weight. The roving Bushman, with little to bless himself with in material wealth, sings all day for very lightness of heart; while the latest products of civilization—with some exceptions, thank Heaven!—go to their daily tasks with apathetic faces, as if they were prisoners. There are, in short, two spirits in man, and both seem equally natural, equally essential in making him what he is. He is an animal, and sometimes would be glad to be nothing more. But there has been realised within him by social action and co-operation the sense of something better. He has gained a social spirit that puts him into sympathy with his fellow-creatures, and has in it an expansion to which no limits can be set. But it is a spirit which is only to be maintained in struggle against his old animal self. That each of us can seek to develop our individual minds, and reach intellectual, artistic or social eminence, is possible only because we are raised on the joined hands of many unknown to fame who have by stern resolve formed a solid roof over that abyss of mere animality into which we should otherwise fall.—Professor W. Wallace.

In London the month of August was one of the coldest on record.
