You can use it knowing that it is bound to do you good.

A machine which will drill square holes has at last been made. An Englishman named Edward Seggie is the inventor, and his apparatus has solved a problem heretofore regarded as being about as unaccomplishable as the mathematical impossibility of "squaring the circle." Seggie's machine is a "three winged" drill, semi-round, which cuts four straight edges in its rotary motion, that is, the motion appears to the eye to be rotary, but there is a maneuver in the triple flange which produces the square cut, triangular or other angular holes, with automatic regularity and machine speed.

A LOCAL ITEM.

Patrick B.—from drunken broil;—While his wife burns midnight oil, Waiting up three flights of stairs, Burdened with consuming cares Sits beside the baby sweet; Hark! the tread of heavy feet.

Oath and bluster, storm and curse; Hardly is a demon worse; Bursts the door and rushes in, Mad with drink and full of sin. Flies in peril of her life, Poor, affrighted, faithful wife.

At the bedside of the child Stands the frantic man, and wild; Takes the sleeper, fond and soft, Opens quick the window loft, On the pavement hear a sound; There a lifeless babe is found.

Just an item; only that; Topic of a moment's chat, While the Juggernaut still rolls, Crushing out unnumbered souls, Stains the streets with human gore; Just an item, nothing more.

Where is justice? heavens! where? Where is manhood? Speak and dare! Is the soul of honor fled? Is the public conscience dead? Is this modern age so tame That it dare not utter "shame?"

God of helpless children, rise Send out whirlwinds from the skies; Thunder down the heights of air, Answer to the children's prayer; All the help of man is vain, While the weepers kiss their slain.

Sovereign people will ye kneel, Put your necks beneath the heel Of the Oligarch, and wait, While he moves with tread of fate? Oh, how patient! Oh, how meek! Sovereign people, are ye weak?

Who will show contempt of wrong? Who will dare the proud and strong? Let us take the solemn vow, Nevermore to yield or bow, While the great Mogul of lust Tramples children in the dust. Dwight Williams, in Southern Journal.

ACTIVITY AT WASHINGTON.

Mr. Louis F. Schade, editor of the Washington Sentinel, a brewer's organ, denounces as a farce the voting in the House of Representatives whereby a bill was passed prohibiting the sale of liquor at immigrant stations, as well as a bill abolishing the sale of liquors in the Capitol building. He claims to be able to bring to bear such political pressure that the bill concerning immigrants will not pass the Senate this session. It is pointed out, however, that when the first Anti-Canteen Law was nullified, Mr. Schade boasted that Congress would never pass another, and when Congress did pass another, he declared he would secure its repeal, but he failed.

Enforcing Law "Literally."

The former village of Yorkville is now in the heart of uptown New York. At the Practice Court there the other day Magistrate Cornell said: "I don't believe in this theory of literal enforcement of the excise law. If the people of this great city are not satisfied with the law, they can go to the Legislature and get it changed. This way of enforcing the law literally is simply hypocrisy, and the people who talk in favor of it don't know what they are talking about." General Grant, when President of the United States, always insisted on the enforcement of law. "If a law is good," he said, "it ought to be enforced; if bad, enforcement will tend to its repeal."

POLITICAL DUTY.

Walter Thomas Mills, of Chicago, says: "Generations of suffering and struggle have enfranchised the people—have made of every man a prince—have vested in him the right, and imposed on him the duty of participation in the management of the Government to whose authority he bows." Referring to the oft-heard remark, "I'm not responsible—I do not vote," he says: "I didn't get whipped—I wasn't in the battle," would be no more cowardly a taunt from a stay-in-the-rear soldier to a hard-fighting and badly-whipped comrade, than the frequent boast of American citizens, that they have nothing to do with the dirty pool of politics. The moral he draws is, that every voter should vote. The moral just now in Ontario is, that every temperance man should do his utmost for Provincial Prohibition at the approaching referendum, or for ever hold his peace.

HIS PERSONAL CHARM.

Though Dr. Guthrie will be known forever by his lasting good works, a later generation can never appreciate entirely what he was to his immediate acquaintances. There was a personal charm about him that was reported irresistible. In his early days Guthrie was no milk and water youth. Fighting was his favorite pastime as a boy. He boasted, and justly, that he could fight any boy in Brechin. When a student in Edinburgh he and some companions were wont to attend Old Greyfriars. They sat in an unoccupied pew known as the "the elders' seat," and the beadle evidently thought this presumptuous. One Sunday the pew door was locked. Guthrie's companions turned away. But not so he. Regardless of the assembled congregation, he placed one hand on the door, and lightly vaulted over, his friends then following. Years afterwards, when he was called to that very church, one old parishioner was heard to observe to another: "That's the same lang student who jumped into the elders' seat lang syne."

Paine's Celery Compound
CURES RHEUMATISM.

The Only Medicine that Prevents a Return of the Terrible Disease.

Rheumatism, which does its terrible work in the muscles, joints and tissues, is caused by uric acid which gathers in the blood. To get rid of this poisonous acid which produces the irritations, pains, agonies, inflammations and swellings peculiar to rheumatism, Paine's Celery Compound should be used without delay. No other medicine gives such prompt, cheering and happy results. It is the only medicine that prevents a return of the dreaded disease. Paine's Celery Compound braces the nerves, the blood is cleared of all irritating poisons, tissue and muscle are built up and the digestive organs perfectly toned. Do not treat with indifference the slightest symptoms; early use of Paine's Celery Compound will prevent weeks and months of suffering.

Mr. G. J. McDonald, Cornwall, Ont., writes as follows:—"For three years I suffered terribly from rheumatism. It seemed to me that I was forced to endure all the agonies and pains that a mortal could possibly experience from the disease. While suffering, I tried many of the advertised medicines, also doctors' prescriptions, but never found a cure until I procured a supply of Paine's Celery Compound. It worked like a charm, and seemed to strike at the very root of my trouble. I am now cured; all pains are banished, and in every respect I am a new man."

SEEKING HOMES IN CANADA.

The steamer Lake Ontario is bringing out the first batch of South African Reservists who are seeking a home and suitable employment in Canada.

After the war difficulty was found in providing berths for the usual number of army Reservists who were discharged from military associations. Their employers found it impossible to keep their positions open, owing to the unusually long duration of the war, and a number of Reservists have been wandering about the large towns of England unable to obtain employment. Many lost the associations they had with former firms and they have been in considerable peril of sinking in the social scale.

Sir Alfred Jones, who has an eye for pity and a heart for melting charity has noticed these otherwise capable men wandering about wearily and listlessly, and has been moved to action on their behalf. He arranged to give special facilities to likely men in the way of reduction of fares and other advantages. The result was that a first contingent, consisting of 35 men, left Liverpool on the Lake Ontario of the Elder Dempster Beaver Line on Nov. 4th.

The men looked strong, says the Liverpool Post, and have all the capabilities which are wanted to become good colonists. The hope of some definite programme in their lives seems to have brought back all their manliness of character. There were no lighter footsteps on the gangway of the Lake Ontario than those exhibited by the Reservists on their departure from "The Gate of the West."

Sir Alfred's kindness was spoken of with much enthusiasm, and his gift of 1 lb. of tobacco to each of the Reservists was most cordially welcomed.—Montreal Ez.

HOW NELSON DIED.

In 1805 the manoeuvring of a combined French and Spanish fleet with Admiral Villeneuve drew Nelson in headlong pursuit from the West Indies. At daybreak of Oct. 21st, off Cape Trafalgar, the hostile fleet was seen from the deck of the Victory drawn up in order of battle. Nelson's preparations for action were soon made, and before noon his signal, which will be remembered as long as the British name shall endure, was greeted with three rapturous cheers throughout the fleet, "England expects that every man will do his duty." Lord Collingwood, in describing the battle, says:—"It was a severe action—no dodging or manoeuvring. They formed their line with nicety, and waited our attack with composure. They did not fire a gun till we were close to them; and we began first. Our ships were fought with a degree of gallantry which would have warmed your heart; everybody exerted themselves, and a glorious day they made of it. All did admirable, and the conclusion was grand beyond description—eighteen hulks of the enemy lying among the British fleet without a stick standing and the French Achilles burning." Just as the Bucentaure's fire was almost silenced, the Victory ran foul of the Redoubtable, and the hooks and boom irons getting intermixed the two ships became locked alongside each other. The Redoubtable took fire, but the English sailors extinguish it by dashing buckets of water through their port holes into those of the enemy as the muzzles of their guns touched their sides. During the confusion a ball, fired from the mizzen top of the Redoubtable, struck the epaulette on Nelson's right shoulder about a quarter to one. He fell on his left side. "They have done for me at last, Hardy," he exclaimed. "My backbone is shot through." On being examined in the cockpit the wound was found to be mortal. After some hours of suffering, during which he murmured "Thank God, I have done my duty," he passed away.
