KINGS ON THE GOLF LINKS.

The news that King Edward is developing a remarkable enthusiasm for golf, and when he is at Windsor rarely fails to spend a couple of hours a day on the sporting little nine-hole course there, takes one back to the days when golf was a favorite pastime of his royal predecessors. The Stuart kin s were keen goner to a man, and many an interesting record is preserved of their doings on the links. When James Duke of York, afterwards James II., had his court at the palace of Holyrood, and spent his days in a succession of sions of all kinds in and out of doors Woodhouselee, wrote: 'I romember in my youth to have conversed with an old man named Andrew Dickson, a golf club maker, who said that when a boy he used to carry the duke's golf clubs and run before him and announce where the balls fell ' There may be seen to this day substantial memorial of the duke's love of golf in an ancient house on the north side of the Canongate, Edinburgh. On the house is a tablet bearing a coat of arms with, for Englishmen, and James in his delight handed over half the winnings to his humble coadjutor. With this sum the shoemaker built himself the substantial house which survives to-day in the Canongate, and on its front the duke caused the escutcheon described above to be affixed.

The first James was as enthusiastic a golfer as the second, and was indeed more than a match for some of the reputed good players of his time. He even did honor to the game by formally appointing golf club and ball makers under the Privy Seal of Scotland. Wm Mayne, 'bower burges of Edinburgh,' was constituted 'Mr fledger, bower, club maker, and speir maker to his Hieness;' and in 1618 James Melvill and others were empowered to furnish 'his Hieness Kingdom of Scotland with golf ballis' for the space of twenty one years,' our Soverane Lord understanding that thair is no small quantitie of gold and silver transported yeirlie out of his Hieness Kingdome of Scotland for bying of golf ballis.'

Henry, son of James I., was a noted golfer, even as a boy, and of him the following story is told : 'At another time playing at golf, a play not unlike to pale maillie, whilst his schoolmaster stood talking with another, and marked not his Highness warning him to stand farther off, the Prince, thinking he had gone aside, lifted up his golf club to strike the ball. Meantyme one standing by said to him, 'Beware that you hit not Master Newton ;' wherewith he, drawing back his hand, said 'Had I done so I had but paid my debts."" King Charles I. was equally devoted to the game, and it is on record that it was while playing on the HINTS ON GIVING.

HEALTH IN SPRING.

Nature Requires Assistance in Making New, Health-Giving Blood.

Spring is the season when your system needs toning up. In the spring you must have new blood just as the trees must have new sap. Na-ture demands it. Without new blood you will feel weary, weak and lan-guid. With new, rich, red blood you will be sprightly, happy and healthy. The one sure way to get new blood and fresh energy is to take Dr Wil-liams Pink Pills. They actually make new blood. They are the great-est spring tonic in the world. One day the Duke of York wart his wife, and all others whom became engaged in a dispute with two English noblemen of his Court as to whether golf was a peculiarly Scottish or English pastime. Since the Stuart days none of the Sovereigns have taken much practical interest in golf until our own times; though it is true that William IV. was patron of the Royal and Ancient Club of St Andrews, and presented a gold medal for annual competition. Now, after the lapse of Co, Brockville, Ont. two centuries, golf has once again been exalted into royal favor. The Queen, under Ben Sayers' tuition, plays it excellently; the Prince of Wales, also under Sayers' guidance, has become a clever and keen golfer, and the Duke and Duchess of Connaught have spent many hundreds of happy hours on the new course at the Royal Hospital, Dublin, or on the links at Malahide, or at the Viceregal Lodge.
