C. C. RICHARDS & CO.

Dear Sirs,—For some years I have had only partial use of my arm, caused by a sudden strain, I have used every remedy without effect, until I got a sample bottle of MINARD'S LINIMENT. The benefit I received from it caused me to continue its use, and now I am happy to say my arm is completely restored. Gt. St. John, N. B. R. W. HARRISON.

It is a matter of first importance to see that stock are always supplied with fresh, clean water, especially during the droughty days of summer. Many people think that sheep can practically do without water. There could not be a greater mistake.

Chronic Asthma a Heavy Burden.
Asthma is bad enough but when bronchial symptoms are added the sufferer has almost an intolerable existence. An absolute specific is found in fragrant healing Catarrh-ozone which cures chronic cases that other remedies won't even relieve. "For years," writes Capt. Macdonald of Montreal, "I battled with the agonies of bronchitic asthma. Often I couldn't sleep for nights at a time. I spent thousands on doctors and medicines without relief, but one dollar's worth of Catarrh-ozone cured me." Catarrh-ozone can't fail. It's guaranteed. Two months treatment $1.00; trial 25c.

Although it is often advisable to feed ground the soil of a flower garden is very easily made too rich by the application of manures, and when this is the case the plants grow rank and over-luxuriant, and do not bloom well.

When you do not relish your food and feel dull and stupid after eating, all you need is a dose of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. They will make you feel like a new man and give you an appetite like a bear. For sale by all druggists.

Rhubarb water is not so much drunk as it should be. It is a delicious beverage, and makes a nice change from ordinary summer drinks. Wipe, but do not peel, a large stalk of rhubarb, cut it into thin pieces; put these into a large jug; add a thin piece of lemon peel, and pour on it a quart of boiling water. When cool, but not cold, add sugar to taste. Keep it well covered until quite cold enough to drink.

There are very few annuals that will better repay good cultivation than sweet peas, especially the large flowering strains that are so popular and where cut flowers are in request they ought to receive every attention, as, with judicious management, a plentiful supply of bloom of the most exquisite colors can be had from May to September.

Owners of horses frequently err by keeping their favorites long away from water. The consequence is that the animals are apt to gorge themselves with the fluid when they find an opportunity. A horse does not drink very deeply when the water is always within reach of him.

Dysentery causes the death of more people than smallpox and yellow fever combined. In an army it is dreaded more than a battle. It requires prompt and effective treatment. Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy has been used in nine epidemics of dysentery in the United States with perfect success, and has cured the most malignant cases, both of children and adults, and under the most trying conditions. Every household should have a bottle at hand. Get it to-day. It may save a life. Sold by all druggists.

HOW TWO MEN TOOK A CITY.

BY HARRY W. HAVENS, JACKSONVILLE

At this moment Durepo recognized the man before him to be the Duc de Rochelle. Putting his hand to his lips he came forward and clasped his comrade round the neck and in a whisper the first word he had uttered to any man save himself, for two days said, "Sire, how came you here?" "There is no time to lose," said Rochelle, "I will tell anon but my dear friend, do tell me how you came here at this hour. Has the guiding hand of our great Creator, whom I have at this late hour learned to serve, piloted you to this spot that you might do honor to France, win glory for yourself and save the lives of your friends, for, as God liveth, if you had not appeared in the door, in five seconds the spirit of Louis Farneau de Rochelle would have taken its flight on angel wings to a world of peace and Zaragoza would have been destroyed." "Oh, brave heart, the Emperor will reward thee for this," said Durepo. "Never mind your flattery now," replied Rochelle, "but tell me how you came here." "Well," the sergeant answered, "I would rather wait until many leagues were between us and the Spaniards before I tell you all, but as there seems to be none here I will proceed. On the 22d, five days ago, Marshall Lasnes arrived in camp. He looked at the charts and maps and found that but little had been gained and much was to be accomplished immediately, but either Castanne, Cuesta or Romana should send reinforcements to the besieged. He could see no way of gaining the city but my storm and this seemed impossible for ten thousand to take a city of forty thousand by assault. Far across the city he saw a light burning and he seemed to think that perhaps it had been lighted by some French prisoners (for he knew that some had been taken) to aid him in a secret plan by which the city might be taken. Accordingly he called his officers together and told them the tenor of his thoughts.

Rochelle who up to this time had listened intently, interrupted him. "What—surely he did not think of sending one man over that great wilderness, to scale yonder wall and—aud, getting in earnest he began to speak loudly.

"Hush, be quiet," cautioned Durepo. "Satan's minions may be lurking near," and at this Rochelle lowered his voice, simply whispering to his comrade, "surely Lasnes did not expect a man to do this."

"He most certainly did," was the sergeant's reply, "but stop, you have interrupted me, let me proceed. There were about one hundred and fifty officers by his side around the camp fire that night and everyone was eager to be the one upon whom the task might fall. We could not decide so we cast lots."

"To see who was the biggest fool," again interrupted Rochelle.

"Perhaps so," was Durepo's reply, "but anyhow the lot fell to me and I started at once. I took my two pistols, my good sword (proudly touching his blade), and a haversack full of provisions. At exactly half past eleven, shortly before the moon sank behind those rugged hills, I began my march."

"To capture Zaragoza," put in Rochelle.

"I met with no opposition that night and before dawn had travelled five miles. I say travelled, well I walked, crawled, stumbled, jumped, fell and did everything imaginable in so short a distance. At daybreak I found shelter for I dare not proceed again until night. I tell you, sire, that was the longest day I ever saw and when at a quarter to seven in the evening I left my shelter and continued my journey it seemed to me that I had spent half the time since I left my home during that day. For half an hour I proceeded cautiously and timidly, gliding in and out among the rocks, always keeping my closest watch upon the surrounding country. Just as the bell on some convent of this city was ringing out the hour of eight, it being now very dark, I came unexpectedly upon the Ebro river. I followed along the river keeping my eye continually fixed upon the light to which I was with steady though tardy steps making my approach. It grew so intensely dark that I dare go on no further and from that hour it being nearly three o'clock until seven this night, I made no movement. But during all this time I made myself acquainted with the surrounding country. I could see that the light by which I had been guided was in a tower on the top of this very building."

"Great heavens!" quickly spoke out Rochelle, who had listened with intense interest, "who knows but what that tower is the headquarters of Palafox, the Spanish commander? What if this were true? Oh, what glory would be withheld from us poor wretches if we could but blow up the commander and his staff with all their plans, the city would at once capitulate—but the hours are fast flying, continue your story. I never heard the like before, and doubted that there was a man in France that dare do such a deed."

"From my secluded position," went on Durepo, "I could see the Spanish position on the farther side of yonder gulch."

A LUCKY WOMAN.

How Good Health Came to Mrs. Deschene after Much Suffering.

Mrs. Abraham Deschene, wife of a well known farmer at St. Leon le Grand, Que., considers herself a lucky woman. And she has good cause as the following interview will show: "I was badly run down and very nervous. Each day brought its share of household duties, but I was too weak to perform them. My nerves were in a terrible condition. I could not sleep and the least sound would startle me. I tried several medicines and tonic wines, but none of them helped me. In fact I was continually growing worse, and began to despair of ever being well again. One day a friend called to see me and strongly advised me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I decided to do so, and it was not long before they began to help me. I gained in strength from day to day; my nerves became strong and quiet, and after using about a half dozen boxes of the pills I was fully restored to my old time health and cheerfulness. I now think Dr. Williams' Pink Pills an ideal medicine for weak women."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills feed the nerves with new, rich red blood, thus strengthening and soothing them, and curing such nerve troubles as neuralgia, St. Vitus dance, partial paralysis and locomotor ataxia. These pills also cure all troubles due to poor and watery blood, including the special ailments of women. Get the genuine with the full name, "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People" on the wrapper around each box. THREE THOUSAND CLUBS.

According to a British statistician, the increase in the number of golfers is proceeding at an amazing rate notwithstanding the commonly recognized fascinations of the game. The latest census of golf clubs shows that there are at present 870 of them in England alone. The United States comes second with 769, and Scotland is now relegated to third place with 682. In Ireland there are 134, and in Wales 43. Canada possesses the same number as the principality, in India there are 37, in Australia 35, in New Zealand 34, and in South Africa 26. At different places on the continent there are 69, and there is every indication that before very long France will get the golfing fever badly. In China there are four clubs, and Japan evinces one more tendency towards Europeanism in that a golf club has been established there which, though mainly for Britishers, has Japanese members.

Thus the total number of clubs at present in existence may be set down roughly at 3,000. The average membership of these clubs may fairly be reckoned at 200 each, giving a total of 600,000. Then there are undoubtedly many thousands of unattached golfers, so that the entire population of the golfing world cannot be very far short of three-quarters of a million. What with subscriptions, extra green fees, periodical purchases of clubs and balls, it is in the highest degree unlikely that these golfers spend less than $50 a year each on the game they love so well, so that on this estimate, which can err only on moderation, a sum of $37,000,000 is spent in every twelve months by the people who play golf.

In the United States the number of open tournaments this year has been nearly as great as last year, but the loss in number has been more than made up by the club matches, which have been much more numerous than in other years. It has been a rule in the past to consider July and August dead months, as far as golfing was concerned, but this year the clubs have gone right on with their weekly and semi-weekly handicaps and on Saturdays all the links are well occupied.

Badly Crippled with Lane Back

Was almost used up with kidney disease, but cure came with the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

MR. PIERRE D'ASTOUS, Farmer, St. Flavie, Rimouski Co., Que., writes:—"For several years I was troubled with a weak, lame, aching back, and had become so crippled that I could scarcely lift anything at all. I also had pains in the arms and legs and began to consider myself about used up at sixty-seven years of age."

"One day I received a book describing kidney disease and its symptoms and found out the nature of my ailment. I began using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and noticed a marked improvement when the first box was finished. I continued to use them from time to time and to-day I am real well, entirely cured of backache and kidney disease." Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, 25 cents a box.
