Another Grand Hospital Supper.

It will be good news to hundreds of our friends in the county to learn that on the evening of Thanksgiving day, October Eighteenth, there will be a grand Supper in the new Armoury in aid of the Carleton County Hospital. The success that has attended similar affairs in the past speaks well for the coming event. The Ladies in town are entering into the work with commendable energy, and it is admitted on all sides that the event is sure to be liberally patronized. It has been thought best to have the supper partake of the nature of a regular old-fashioned feast, in which the delicious Baked Beans and Brown Bread may take a leading part. Then there will be all the luxuries the splendid cooks in this part of the world are famous for preparing. Anyone who has sat down to one of the past suppers knows just what a delightful feast will be served. In order to render it still more within the reach of all it has been decided to charge only thirty-five cents per meal. This will enable whole households to attend. It is of course understood that there will be room for contributions of eggs, fowl, butter, pastry, and cash from all who may feel at all disposed to assist in the worthy enterprise. Any person who will help is earnestly requested to render all the assistance possible when the solicitors call. In fact it would be well not to wait for a formal invitation, but send the offers to the President of the Ladies Auxiliary, Mrs. A. Wilmot Hay, or to Mrs. R. B. Jones, Mrs. Carvell, Mrs. Bailey, or any other lady on the committee. He gives twice who gives quickly. The Hospital needs all the help it can get. It is altogether dependent upon the people for its maintenance, as the amount collected from patients is far too small to run the institution. All creeds and classes participate in the benefits. The chairman of the Board of Trustees this year is Father McMurray, who is taking a lively interest in the work. Others on the Board include Mayor Munro, Warden Bailey, Hon. H. A. Connell, Colonel Diblee, Colonel Vince, ex-Mayor Belyea, and Mr. H. A. Seely. It is to be hoped that all hands will make it a point to observe a special Thanksgiving for having such a splendid institution in our county.

The Gleaner Again.

Evidently the Fredericton conservative sheet has fears for the future of some of its new found political friends in the event of the Transcontinental coming down the Valley. In the Saturday issue of the Gleaner there is an editorial in which an effort is made to poke a little fun at the SENTINEL for its course in insisting upon the selection of the Valley route providing the route itself can show that it offers advantages at least equal to those of the Cross Country section. From the very inception of the project the Gleaner has thrown cold water on the building of the road down the Valley, in fact it has for months and months been declaring that the road will never be built East of Quebec. This is for mere political effect. The Gleaner knows better. It is too astute a journal not to realize that the Eastern Section is as sure of being built as is the Western. The advocates of the natural route through our province have been and are to-day up against the stiff opposition of influential parties. The fight though is by no means hopeless. When the battle is over and the victory won we suppose the Gleaner will bob up serenely and claim all the credit for itself and its quondam associates, the conservative members for the province. In the event of the Central route carrying off the honors the Gleaner would be better pleased for it would seek to inflame the folk living in the Valley. Anything for political effect seems to be the motto of the Opposition.

People from all over the county have this week been having a fine opportunity of seeing a successful fair in Woodstock. The attendance has been something of which all connected with the show should feel proud. There of course are lots of people who did not come to the exhibition. Let all who have not been here go next week to the Centreville Fair, and also everyone who saw the Woodstock show and possibly can do so, ought to go to Centreville and see just how well our enterprising up-river friends can run an Exhibition. The Centreville show is in the hands of men who know how to put on a fine exhibition. We bespeak a splendid patronage for Centreville during their two day show next Wednesday and Thursday.

That Flag Incident.

It is seldom we pay any attention to the remarks of anonymous correspondents in the papers, but we believe an exception may well be made in the case of one styling himself "Canadian" in the last issue of the Press. This worthy contributor, who personally deserves very little attention, seems to have wandered far from the point under discussion. He tells us that the SENTINEL is either grossly ignorant of History or else is imbued with a partisan desire to slander the memory of Sir John Macdonald. Far from it. We may perhaps know very little History, which would put us in the same class as "Canadian," but we will plead not guilty to the charge of slandering the great Sir John. There is some question as to his attitude with reference to the Annexation manifesto, but as to another Sir John, one of whom evidently "Canadian" has never heard, there is no doubt that Sir John Abbott, afterwards Conservative premier of Canada, actually did sign a document in the year 1849, prepared by disgruntled Tories, in which a threat was made that Annexation would be urged if Lord Elgin was continued as Governor. Sir John Abbott was a member of the party that "Canadian" belongs to,—the party whose members hurled malodorous eggs at the Queen's representative—the party that on another occasion pelted rocks at the same governor's carriage, and finally in a frenzy of angry disappointment, actually burned the parliament buildings in Montreal. Oh no, these Latter Day Saints of Toryism and Veneer Loyalty hate to have the varnish rubbed off. They are too sensitive to the bald truth. When they were in power they had plenty of lip loyalty, an asset of which they yet have quite a stock in trade, but never contributed one cent to the defence of the Empire. These folk, of whom "Canadian" is a fair specimen, would have us believe that they are the only pure and unadulterated Loyalists. We can tell the anonymous scribbler that he displays mighty poor judgment in rushing in to print when he has no better excuse than the one he uses on the present occasion. "Canadian" may after a fashion be loyal enough, but he seems to have no knowledge of History. Indeed his chief attainment would seem to consist of an uncontrollable habit of "batting in." Facts are stubborn things. If "Canadian" wants any more let him come again, over his own signature.

WILL ELECT A BISHOP.

Next Tuesday the Synod will meet in Fredericton to elect a Coadjutor. It seems to be taken for granted that Canon Richardson's friends in the laity will not persist in voting for him, more especially should it become apparent on the first ballot that another clergyman has a stronger hold upon the clergy. Youth is on his side, and to one not a member of his communion it would seem as if he may easily become a Bishop by exercising patience for the present. Discussing the matter, the Gleaner says:—

"The New Brunswick correspondent of the Canadian Churchman a correspondent who is credited with having a good knowledge of Church of England matters in this Province, says in last week's Churchman, that there is no break in the laity ranks in its support of Canon Richardson, and that there is no change as far as can be learned in the standing of the clergy. If this writer is correct the deadlock still exists. There is a feeling however, in certain quarters that there will be no deadlock and this feeling is expressed by parties who may be considered as in a position to know a thing or two. These latter incline to the view that the election will go much more smoothly and easily than it is anticipated by the general public and though they refuse to state their reasons, they no doubt possess them. One party in conversation said that if the synod gets down to work early Tuesday morning you will find that a Bishop Coadjutor will be elected before dinner." As to the report that a clergyman not now nominated may be brought forward, should the deadlock continue, is not given much credence. Such a step would not be found so easy. At the meeting in July the nominations were closed by the unanimous consent of all present and to again open them up might be easier said than done. This course is not now anticipated.

Harold Trafton was in town a few days this week. He has been a telegrapher in the service of the I. C. R., but has now gone with the B. & A. people, who have appointed him assistant station agent at Bridgewater.
