Self-Explanatory

We, the undersigned members of the Petit Jury in the case of the King vs B F Smith, tried at the July Term of the Carleton County Court, hereby individually certify that Albion R Foster did not, either before or during the said trial, in any way influence or seek to influence us as to the verdict which we would render therein.

William Hayden, Charles R Carman, James Watson, John N Emery, Howard P Clark, J W Palmer, Allison M Shaw, F W Britton, Elisha Palmer, George W Melville, David Alexander.

An Old Friend Heard From.

Dear Sentinel:

This is the twenty fourth day of July, 1907 and it is a very hot one, and for the last three days the mercury has been playing between 90 and 100. This is pretty warm weather for us. The furniture and earthenware feel warm to touch. It is reported that three horses fell dead in Macon yesterday from the heat. The temperature was over one hundred. Several people fell prostrate on the street, but no deaths, as I hear of. This is the weather to make cotton. This crop in places in fine, but will be late this season. Our legislature is in session now. A bill for prohibition has passed the senate, and is to be voted on in the lower house to-day. I wish I could insert in this letter that it has passed and is a law. If I hear the decision of the house before I mail this I will sure add it as a P. S. I learn that a Mrs Sherwood of Jacksonville has passed to her glorious reward. How bright and clear must have been her way to her home and her God. She was such a good woman. I knew her soon after her marriage before the civil war in the States. How many lives she has helped and how many good deeds she has done. The great reckoning day will only reveal. God bless the loved ones left behind and help them to get ready to enter in through the same door that she passed through (Christ)

How many thousand prayers are going up to day in Georgia from men, women and children for the passage of the prohibition bill and getting rid of the worst evils to our race. This is a hot day for such a hot battle as is being fought in the legislative halls. Let all the world pray for our success and victory. The peach crop in Georgia is not good at all. The worms are in the fruit, and a large percent rots on the trees.

I have a little complaint to make against some one, but I can't point him out. In the spring I ordered a bottle of maple syrup from a friend, thinking I could thus get a pure article, but when the package came it contained only the neck of the bottle, and the cork in it, but no sign of syrup. I have put in my claim for damages but so far I have received nothing.

Evangelistic Meetings.

The Evangelistic meeting held at the Exhibition building last Sunday was well attended and a good interest manifested. Rev S A Baker will preach there again on Sunday at 3.45 p.m.

A cordial invitation is extended to all.

B FRANK HOLDS $150.

Here is another lame duck argument from King Street.

"Nearly three years ago at the organization of the Press Printing Co, B F Smith took six shares of the stock, paying therefor $150, and he has acquired no stock since. He has never attended a meeting of the stockholders and has been inside the office doors but once since the company was organized and that was over a year ago. How silly it is for the SENTINEL to state that B F Smith is responsible for the conduct of the Press and that nothing of a contentious nature is printed without his consent. Living in East Florenceville and spending the greater part of his time in the northern part of the county, Mr Smith is not in touch with matters transpiring in this office."

Mr Smith may not call very frequently at the Press sanctum, still he is a frequent visitor to Woodstock and generally occupies No 2 in a certain hotel not more than a Sabbath day's journey from King Street. Mahomet may not come to the mountain, yet it would not be fair to infer on that account that the Press editor has not recently been in conference with Mr Smith and the inner ring. Even thought Mr Smith lives in Florenceville the postal service is fairly good and he has more than one way of reaching the organ which he controls. If Mr Smith is really not responsible for the course of the Press he has at least one thing to be thankful for.

A Weak Denial.

Last issue we charged the Press with being unfair in its treatment of the Smith case. The King Street mud volcano in the following lame defence, admits the charge. It says:—

"Under the heading, 'The One Sided Press,' the organ of the late A G Blair, claims that we printed a one sided report of the evidence in the recent Smith case. We admit that we rather favored the defendant in printing the evidence. Our contemporary however, also showed its onesidedness. The stenographer's type written copy of Tize Dyer's evidence was furnished it but after giving in full his direct evidence the subject was dropped and the cross-examination of the witness by Mr Hartley, which was favorable to the defence did not appear. This the Press, printed the following week. We cannot admit that the SENTINEL ever showed a disposition to give its opponents any more than was coming to them."

Mark the admission. The Press says "We admit that we rather favored the defendant in printing the evidence." The favor went so far as to utterly fail to print the evidence for the Crown. There was no report of Mr Carvell's speech to the jury, and not even a summary of the Judge's charge, which we printed in full. No person has ever known the Press to give an opponent anything like fair play. No person looks for fair treatment in that quarter.

A Reformer.

"Referring to the present political agitation, a former Liberal, who has severed his connection with the party, told the writer that the worst deeds he ever committed were done in the interest and at the request of the present leaders of the Liberal party in this county."

No, gentle reader, the above is not a quotation from Mark Twain. It is from an unknown genius who seeks to picture through the columns of the Press the happy frame of mind some former lost political soul is now enjoying as a supporter of B Frank Smith. This poor unknown elector seems to have repented of wrongdoing in the aid and at the bequest of Liberals, and to save his soul has sought an alliance with white-winged, angelic, pure and spotless men like Mr Smith and the other Tory leaders in Carleton.

The Gough homestead at Lower Woodstock was totally destroyed by fire early Monday morning. It is thought that the fire caught from a flue. James Gough and mother were the occupants,—also Martin Gough who was stopping with them. Over half their furniture was destroyed. There was a small insurance. James Gough lost a pocketbook containing over fifty dollars in cash. The neighbors all turned out and did what they could to save the belongings. The outbuilding escaped.

The Jury in the famous Idaho murder case against W D Haywood, returned a verdict of "Not Guilty."

A Sensible Correspondent.

Editor Sentinel

SIR,—I feel very much like uttering a protest against the condition of affairs existing not only in Carleton County, but all over the province. We display altogether too much politics, and far too little common sense. One side is about as bad as the other. Between a Dissolution of the House and Declaration Day should be plenty of time for acrimonious political discussion. When it comes to the point where in the mid-season between fights all hands instead of remaining cool, become red hot, it is surely high time for someone to call a halt, in the interests of common decency. Poverty and Politics go hand in hand. Here in Carleton County we could far better employ our talents discussing Prosperity and Potatoes.

Yours truly,

INDEPENDENT.

Wedding Bells at Bristol.

The home of Mr and Mrs Charles Lockhart of Bristol, N. B., was the scene of a pretty wedding on Wednesday July 24th, when their daughter Lydia was united in holy matrimony to Frank, eldest son of Rev D E Brooks of Bristol, N. B., in the presence of about twenty five of the immediate relatives of the contracting parties. At four o'clock the bride and groom entered the room for the ceremony which was nicely decorated with green. The bride beautifully dressed in white serge trimmed with chiffon and lace and the groom in conventional black. The nuptial knot was tied by Rev J M Mallory of Kilburn, N. B. After the ceremony the guests repaired to the dining room where a delicious repast was partaken of.

The happy couple will reside in Bristol we trust long to grace the society of the village. Their many friends wish them a prosperous and happy future.

Under the eyes of his father and done by fire to a large block of buildings in Vulcan street, Liverpool, belonging to the Warehousing Company, Four thousand five hundred bales of cotton were destroyed.

The Idol of the Nation.

'Laurier the idol of the nation,' is the appropriate heading under which the 'Canada' described the unique happenings of the welcome to Canada's chief minister,—we had almost said, her uncrowned king. Certainly, the welcome given to Sir Wilfrid, in continuity, in numbers and in enthusiasm, is unique in the history of Canada so far, and is not likely soon to be repeated, unless in his personal enthusiasm, like a wind, nay, a tornado, has swept through crowd after crowd, all the way from Quebec to Montreal and Ottawa; there have been triumphal arches, gorgeous lights and bunting bands and syrens and crowds in thousands. No man so far in this country has got so near to the hearts of the people as has Wilfrid Laurier, and it would not be easy to find a parallel elsewhere. Sir John Macdodd, our greatest figure in the past, was the idol rather of a party than of a nation. Gladstone was well beloved, but he was finely hated too; Lord Beaconsfield, after the Berlin Congress, came home with 'Peace with Honor,' setting one half of the English people delirious with joy and the other half wild with rage or scorn; but nobody hates Sir Wilfrid no one begrudges him his great European triumph. Even those who profess most to distrust and dislike his policy and some of his colleagues, assure us that for Sir Wilfrid personally they have the highest admiration. This is naturally accounted for by his innate courtesy and the spirit of conciliation that has dominated his policy where the two races are concerned and which has overflowed, as it were, into the field of politics. Add to this that Sir Wilfrid is easily the most knightly figure upon the stage of our life today and his universal popularity is easily accounted for. So, as the 'Presse' expresses it, it is a country not a party which expresses the most cordial and the most enthusiastic of welcomes to the chief of the state. —Montreal Witness.
