nuisance in connection with the Sunshine. Because the Sunshine is fitted with a dust flue (see illustration.) When you rock down the ashes (no back-breaking shaking with the Sunshine) what dust arises is drawn from the ash-pan up the dust-flue, then across the fire-pot to the smoke-pipe, as shown in illustration, where it immediately ascends to the outer air. Only two things to remember in connection with this operation:—open both the dust and direct draft dampers. ## MOIR'S

The particular hostess naturally selects Moir's Chocolates for a stylish social affair.

When arranged in a bonbon dish, with each chocolate in its neat, fancy paper cup, they look the very essence of daintiness and refined good taste.

My! how delicious they are, too! Such delicately flavored centers, containing creamy confections, nuts, fruits and jellies, concealed under the finest, smoothest coating of the very richest chocolate.

The number of different varieties in each box will delightfully surprise you.

BURPEE & WILSON.

Bienvenue! Welcome

The greeting that welcomed Sir Wilfrid Laurier home again is spoken; the crowds are gone; the lights are out.

"The shouting and the tumult dies." It is natural now to review and to recall these events, not without their possible place in history. What do they mean? Was all this great demonstration spontaneous? To what extent was it artificially stimulated? What will be its effect upon politics? How far is it significant, as voicing the popular estimate of Sir Wilfrid Laurier? To what extent does it reflect the true attitude of Canada towards the imperial conference, and the position which he took therein?

These questions naturally arise. No one can pretend to definitely answer all of them. But those who witnessed the premier's progress from Rimouski to Montreal will not differ among themselves as to many impressions made upon them.

To begin with, it must be admitted that the demonstrations everywhere in the Province of Quebec were magnificent. Were King Edward VII. or Pope Pius X. to visit the ancient capital, he could not receive, the people could not give him, a more remarkable ovation.

And in that great concourse of last Friday night, it must be borne in mind that but few were stirred by the mere curiosity to see a famous man, which often draws a crowd together. Sir Wilfrid Laurier is no stranger in Quebec. For 30 years he has been a frequent visitor. A vast number of the people who followed his carriage and pressed upon the street that night to do him honor.

The ride from the Chateau Frontenac to the market place, where, from an improvised platform, the premier spoke to the people, presented many scenes of passing interest. Quebec is quaint and curious always, with its narrow, winding streets, suggesting some ancient city in a foreign land. Among the flags and decorations, the tricolor was abundant.

The windows, doorways, sidewalks, were filled with people, and in many cases they overflowed the street so as to make the premier's progress slow and difficult. Every home, however humble, displayed a light; there was no darkened house front along the entire route. Electrical signs were abundant—all of them in French—many of them acclaiming Sir Wilfrid Laurier as the protector of liberty, the "defender of our language, laws and customs," the creator of a new nation. Many signs were smaller, and merely flashed "Bien Venue" in welcome to the guest.

What struck a stranger most was the quiet, respectful attention of the crowd. There was little or none of the cheering, shouting, horn-blowing, din and racket, which might accompany a scene like this. So, too, the great crowd that stood in the market and patiently listened to the speeches, but seldom interrupted with applause. Strange to say, the French-Canadian, however deeply interested he may be in the speaker or the speech, but seldom gives assent by noise of any kind. Of course there were sky rockets and fireworks in abundance, but they were kept in place, and at no time disturbed the meeting, or even the parade, except immediately after the meeting, when the coachmen in waiting for Chief Laurier and his braves had some trouble with their horses.

Two of these braves—Aylesworth and Paterson—did not use the language of the tribe. They spoke in English briefly, and were heartily applauded. Indeed, at no point did the minister of justice address the crowd in French, although now and then, in the house, he answers a question in that language, and is even said at times, in Room 16, to address in his own tongue some friendly deputy from Quebec.

That the premier had wonderful weather for days is not to be overlooked. He arrived at Quebec on a moonlight night, so inviting that one naturally sought the open air, the wharf and the river. His meeting night at Quebec on Friday last was equally propitious. Bright weather smiled upon him from Quebec to Montreal, filling the river with canoes and launches and the landing-places with happy, expectant people.

Had it rained hard on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of last week, the Laurier homecoming might have lost much of its grandeur and glory. But, in consenting to these great meetings of welcome, the premier was taking a chance on the weather. He took the chance, and he won!

Meeting a man arriving on a boat, by going upon another boat to greet him, simply means that you see him go by.

The first boat to reach Grosse Isle last Thursday was the Lady Evelyn, the new mail tender, which brought Postmaster-General Lemieux and party from Levis. Soon other boats arrived, and for some anxious moments everyone was trying to sight the big ship, with the big chief on board. Meanwhile, these boats had turned around, and as soon as the Empress came in view, they were racing at full speed ahead of her up the river. Not but that she soon overtook them, passed them, and was lost to view. Indeed, when the Lady Evelyn landed at Quebec, there was some uncertainty among the passengers as to whether Sir Wilfrid Laurier was still upon the Empress, or had gone to the hotel. As a matter of fact, he and Lady Laurier were even then at the chateau, and very brown and strong and pleased he looked, with his friends assembled about him.

The demonstration at Montreal was wonderful, but there was more done here in the way of expenditure and management, and it was, therefore, less significant than the outpouring at Quebec. It is claimed that 100,000 people were upon the streets. This is hard to verify. There were 15,000 at Jacques Cartier Market and the spaces about the city hall, and fully 10,000 at Dominion-square. As a rule, the line of march was flanked by large crowds of people.

At Montreal, however, the Dominion, provincial and municipal governments had expended money lavishly.

Ottawa fell way behind. Of course, there Sir Wilfrid Laurier is an old story. Then, again, it was a miserable, rainy afternoon.

And what does it all mean? It means unmistakably that Sir Wilfrid Laurier still has the Province of Quebec in the hollow of his hand. This was seen no less plainly at Sorel and Three Rivers than at the City of Quebec.

How far was enthusiasm artificially stimulated?

Brass bands, sky-rockets, parades, and the like, undoubtedly bring people together and generate a certain enthusiasm. President Roosevelt, for example, if he visited Canada, would no doubt be accorded a big reception. But, after all is said and done, there was everywhere manifested an unmistakable pride in and affection of Sir Wilfrid Laurier. Discount and disguise it as we may, the Canadian people look upon Sir Wilfrid Laurier differently than upon any other man in Canada.

Here is one test: Suppose the Empress had gone down and the premier had been lost, would there not have been universal grief, a feeling of personal affliction in every home in Canada. We were, all of us, proud to have our country represented by him when the nations of the empire assembled in London. We, all of us, had a comfortable feeling, way down in our hearts, that Canada led, even though our feeling might be voiced in the refrain:

"I don't know where I'm going,
But I know I'm on the way."

A SURE CURE FOR HEADACHE.—Bilious headache, to which women are more subject than men, becomes so acute in some subjects that they are utterly prostrated. The stomach refuses food, and there is a constant and distressing effort to free the stomach from bile which has become unduly secreted there. Parnee's Vegetable Pills are a speedy alternative, and in neutralizing the effects of the intruding bile relieves the pressure on the nerves which cause the headache. Try them.

Mr Martin O'Connor, a barrister, used penny toy models of a motor-omnibus, a horse omnibus, and a cab in the Shoreditch County Court to demonstrate to the jury how a street accident occurred.

I bought a horse with a supposedly incurable ringbone for $30. Cured him with $1.00 worth of MINARD'S LINIMENT and sold him for $85.00. Profit on Liniment, $54.00.
