CRIME AND LIQUOR.

MR EDITOR: It gave me pleasure to learn of the capture, trial and conviction of the young horse thieves whose case was before the court a short time ago. I firmly believe in punishing crime and in doing our best to stamp it out. The young couple certainly got what they deserved and it was well to stop them in their wild career lest they might have gone on sowing their wild oats until they were so steeped in sin that they would have committed some greater crime: even murder or selling rum.

The prison is the place for all law-breakers, for it puts them beyond reach of the stuff that crazes them and eats out their manliness and causes them to commit crime. When they are deprived of their liberty and can reflect on their wrong doings and have a chance for a few sober thoughts they may come to the conclusion that honesty is the safest road to travel and come out determined to go straight the rest of their lives.

I would like to see fair play. I want to see all law breakers punished but why does the rum seller go free? He seems to be a privileged character and sees the inside of a prison so seldom, except when he goes out of curiosity that he hardly knows what it looks like. He may go there perhaps to look at some poor wretch when he was certainly the cause of his being there, but never to take him any nice meal or kind word or good advice. The Christian people have to do that if it is done at all and I am sorry to say that they often neglect their duty. Perhaps they have not time.

It is a pity the temperance people are only half awake. There are so many ways they could make things better than they are. They could write temperance, talk it, do it and vote for none but temperance to men represent us at parliament. Some temperance people are so weak and luke-warm on that point they make me tired. They say the Scott Act is no good, that they do not drink liquor and it does them no harm, but it may do his neighbor, who may when he is under the influence of the stuff injure his best friend.

Rum is a curse to us all in many ways whether we use it or not. On account of it we pay higher taxes and are cheated out of many honest bills as well as being exposed to insult and injury. It is a dose the devil recommends when he wants some mischief done and there are always too many ready to fill the prescription. Then again the breath of some of the politicians and business men are not too sweet on account of it, and when one gets a good sniff it makes him think of a swill barrel. But still they are very clever and want our vote and trade. One good strong smell lasts me a long time and I generally look for purer air to do business in.

Now when Tennyson Smith is among us, helping us in the Temperance cause let every Christian rally around him and make him feel he is in the majority. Every Christian should be strictly temperate and it is their duty to try to put down the greatest enemy to Christianity. A follower of Christ if he pays attention to this teaching will live very straight and be a benefit to his Country. Christ wasted no time on games or selfish pleasure but was always doing good, healing and helping the poor and needy always for getting self. This is the lesson we should learn to forget ourselves for the sake of our fellow man and the greater the sinner the more need to reform time. Let every temperance man and woman have an object in view and pull together and write and talk temperance generally. The pen and press are great powers when used rightly and if we keep the question alive, working shoulder to shoulder no government dare refuse us prohibition when we ask for it.

FAIR PLAY.

Business Changes.

Hugh Hay, founder and senior partner in the firm of Hugh Hay & Son, dry goods dealers, has retired after more than fifty years service. The business in future will be carried on at the same stand, by W Wallace Hay, who now becomes sole partner. The Glasgow House, or The Two Big Stores, is one of the great commercial emporiums of the county. Hugh Hay started in business with limited capital, but unlimited faith in the future of the town and surrounding country. Aided by sagacity and business ability of a high order he was able to build up a magnificent business. Now full of years and esteemed by all, he retires to enjoy the fruits of legitimate toil. The business is left to his son, who needs no introduction to the public. Every one knows W Wallace Hay, and to know him is to admire and respect him. The Glasgow House is bound to continue as one of our principal emporiums. The public certainly know it as the great bargain centre.

Alexander Henderson, after nearly a lifetime in the furniture business, is about to sell his controlling interest in The Henderson Furniture Company to A C Day, who for some months has been a stockholder and virtually manager of the Queen Street retail store. Mr Henderson like Mr Hay, is one of our greatest merchants, and also hails from Scotia's shores. Those who know Alexander Henderson and the part he has taken in the upbuilding of our town are fully aware of the splendid business capacity he has displayed. His memory will ever be green in the hearts of his townsmen. For him all will wish many years more of activity in whatever direction his inclination may select. Mr Day is a young man of exceptional business capacity. He is certain to become every inch as popular as the man he is succeeding. That will be something of which anyone may well be proud.

R B Jones is putting his clothing and haberdashery business into a joint stock company. Mr Berry and Mr Cogger are to be associated with him. The Manchester House was ever a leading business resort. It will certainly lose nothing in popular esteem under the fresh impetus it is to receive through the introduction of new blood. It is a good place to patronize.

McManus Bros are extending their business. James McManus has taken a lease of the shop at Payson's Corner and will open up shortly with a full line of first class dry goods. M. McManus will continue at the old stand.

Arthur Estabrooks at Rockland has decided to reduce the price of his shoe pax and moccasins so if you want a pair come soon as they will soon be all gone. (3 tf)

The Health Store

That is what every Drug Store should be, though many fall short of it. It is because of the lack of drug quality. Sometimes the lack is due to ignorance, and more often to greed for gain.

We consider our business a profession, for that is really what it is. We therefore feel it is our professional duty to dispense the purest drugs procurable—drugs that will truly help in restoring health. When you need drugs be particular and buy them at a health store. If you purchase them here you'll pay only what they are actually worth.
